Dedication

to

Colonel Jennings Cropper Wise

Brilliant writer and inspiring teacher

Enthusiastic in lofty purpose

A lover of the "Old Gray Coat"

Devoted to D. M. I. and her higher achievement

A faithful friend

A courteous gentleman

An efficient soldier

"We owe thee much"

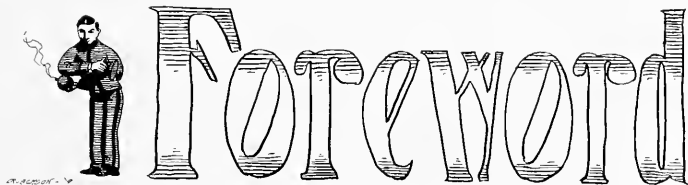

COLONEL JENNINGS CROPPER WISE, B. S., LL. B.

VIRGINIA MOURNING HER DEAD

Photographed and Colored by Paul Strand, New York

Foreword

HE editor of some Annual 'way back yonder in the dark ages modestly apologized for thrusting his work of art upon an unsuspecting public; we would really like to follow his example, along with countless other editors, but we are determined to be original at the start, if nowhere else.

Accordingly, we present the thirty-second volume of THE BOMB with infinite abandon. There are parts of our book that you won't like—neither do we, but we had to fill up three hundred-odd pages with something; and, moreover, we know what happened to the man in the fable who tried to please everybody.

And, at least, we won't burden you with our manifold troubles—the book is not yet printed that is big enough to hold the portrayal of a Keydet's sorrows, when he thinks of home and rev on a cold morning and how many days it is until Finals. We are showing as much of the brighter side of Institute life as we can without being thrown under arrest, and in doing so we have thought of those who will sympathize and understand—the Home Folks and Calic (God bless 'em), Alumni and Friends, Professors and Subs, Classmates and Men of the Corps to-day.

So, when looking over this, our "paper," give us a six for trying—and don't forget what Kipling says:

"An' if sometimes our conduct isn't all your fancy paints, Why, single men in barracks don't grow into plaster saints."

ON THE BOMB

MAIN BARRACKS AND JACKSON MEMORIAL HALL

The corner-stone of barracks was laid July 4, 1850 (southwest corner of barracks), and the building was completed during the next few years and dedicated in 1856. In June, 1896, the Stonewall Jackson Memorial Hall was completed with funds collected by the Stonewall Jackson Memorial Association. In this building are the chapel, gymnasium, and engineering school.

THE SMITH MEMORIAL BUILDING

Was erected in 1901 to the memory of the first Superintendent, Colonel Francis H. Smith, by the Institute, and now comprises the academic hall.

ON THE BOMB

THE MAURY-BROOKE SCIENCE HALL

Built in 1909, and containing the electrical and chemical laboratories. To the memory of Commodore Matthew Fontaine Maury, Professor, V. M. I., from 1868 to 1873, and Captain John Mercer Brooke, Professor, V. M. I., from 1865 to 1906.

THE LIBRARY BUILDING

Was erected by the Institute in 1907. Contains 18,000 volumes. The second floor contains quarters for the Board of Visitors, and on the third floor is the Cadet Dialectic Literary Society Hall.

THE BOMB

THE ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

Was erected in 1903 by the Institute. In it are the tailor shop, military store, treasurer's office, quartermaster's office, and the post exchange.

THE MESS HALL

Was destroyed in 1864, restored, again burned in 1904, and rebuilt on the original foundation in 1905, with an extensive addition and many improvements.

ON THE BOMB

PROFESSORS' QUARTERS

The Superintendent's house was built in 1862. Two other sets of quarters were built between 1850 and 1853, restored in 1867, after being burned, and the third set was built in 1915.

WASHINGTON STATUE

Original by Jean Antoine Houdon. March, 1856, the General Assembly authorized the Governor to expend the sum of $10,000 for the purchase of the first bronze replicas for the Institute. Unveiled in 1856. In June, 1864, it was transported by General Hunter, who destroyed the Institute, as a trophy of war to Wheeling, W. Va., and returned by order of Secretary of War Stanton, in 1865.

THE BOMB

BRONZE GUNS

The two large guns by the Washington Statue, L'Envee and Le Severe, are 24 pounders, and were cast in Duaci, France, in 1693 and 1678, respectively, during the reign of Louis XIV. These great bronze guns weigh 5,500 pounds each, and are each eleven feet seven inches in length.

CADET HOSPITAL

THE BOMB

Fireside Reveries

I am sitting in the armchair by the firelight's ruddy glow,
Lost in dreamy recollections of the days of long ago,
From my pipe the smoke is curling in an azure-tinted cloud,
Soothing out the care and worry under which my head is bowed,
On the pane the frost has gathered, and the night is dark and cold;
From the eaves the snow is whirling, and the winter wind is bold.
As the pages of the past unfold the years at V. M. I.,
My eyes grow dim with longing, from my heart there wells a sigh,
Though the snapping logs blaze cheerful, and the cozy room glows warm,
While within my homely shelter here I can not feel the storm,
Yet my heart is sore within me, as the pictures fade and rise,
For the passing of the friendships and the breaking of the ties.

From afar I hear the sighing of a bugle through the gloom,
And I see a sentry pacing like a shadow through a tomb,
Like a lonely shadow pacing on his cold and weary post,
Keeping guard throughout the nighttime for all the sleeping host.

I can see once more the camp-fire, with the boys all gathered round,
I can see their firelit faces, hear the banjo's haunting sound,
Now before me springs a vision of the gleam of many guns;
Down the road in steady column come Virginia's sturdy sons,
With the colors proudly waving in the balmy Southern air—
'Tis a sight to be remembered, when you once have seen it there.
In the mountains of Virginia, where the sunny hills are blue,
There's a place of fame and valor whose very name rings true.
Oh, the magic of the prideful words—a V. M. I. Cadet!
How glad I am I've been one—how I long to be one yet!

C. C. C., '16.

Sunset at V. M. I.

Just over the top of the rolling hills,
A monarch on his throne,
The setting sun gilds the battlements
With a glory not their own,
Till they seem like pillars of amber light
Transfigured into stone,
And behind them the purple Blue Ridge
Rising rugged 'gainst the sky
That is filled with crimson streamers—
'Tis a sight that will never die
In the hearts of those who have seen it—

WE introduce this molecule by saying that "Mutt" Loth is the only one here now that was when he arrived, and in the meantime "Mutt" dropped out for two years to attend Annapolis. However, we are glad "Tom" remained to graduate with Sixteen, else the class would have missed a charming personality. "Tom" has always been popular, because he is a good mixer. He can list to your joke, and then go you one better by smiling at it. As a Third Classman he was the devil for which some underclassmen are famous as being, but after he had lost his Corp for a misdemeanor, and several other mishaps had taken place, "Differential" reformed. When his First Class year arrived, with its astuteness, he was able to fit in admirably. Through all he has insisted on being an athlete, and, besides his accomplishments in basket-ball, the gym and dumbbells have put many kinks in his figure. In two other respects he is the ideal keydet: he could snore in a boiler factory and he has never taken first stand in his classes. Amory intends to try his lance as a business man, and he is bound to ring the bell, because—

"He's got the friends, he's got the ways, he's got the will to do."

"Ha! Ha!"

STEPPING jauntily from the aft quarter of the Lightning Express(ly) Limited one fateful morning in September, our hero wended his way undismayed to the scene of future battles. On that day Moss learned many things, and the knowledge lent a somberness to his hitherto joyous countenance which the sound of the waves near "Norfolk by the sad, sad sea" does not seem to erase. He proposed to startle the world, and nearly succeeded. But the General refused to enthuse over the "young scamp's" military ability, whereat our young Napoleon decided to encumber the Army. If not too lazy, Moss can tell you how to go to sleep in ranks or how to get from 10-B to formation in half a second less than that. No one ever discovered whether our salt-sea warrior possessed a heart or not. Anyhow, he is minus one now if certain dainty misses from said Norfolk speak truly. And yet Moss is the kind who won't stay down, who knows how to work when the real test comes. Here's hoping him all success!

"How! That is gross—shut the gate."

THE scene above, which represents an editor of no little ability and a lion with the ladies, is a member of the tribe of "Tommy." He was first seen to enter barracks with a sweet potato under one arm and an Irish potato under the other. He was immediately christened "Farmer." But he was not destined to be only a farmer, for his ability as an editor shone out until it was detected by Joe Collins. On the Cadet Staff he lauded the tribe of "Tommy," but spoke no good of the tribes of "Monk," "Rat," and "Chappie." Of course he couldn't get away with these attacks, but suffered a broken nose soon thereafter while fighting for honors on the gridiron. The peculiar thing about this was that it fell to the lot of a Liberal Artist to turn the trick. But this mishap did not call our hero to a halt, for he drowned its effects in—

"Bring on the Overholt, James, the weather has been mighty blustry."

IN this noble, transcendent youth we have one in whom are embodied all the nobler sentiments of mankind—the very essence of honesty and virtue, gentle towards all, yet firm in his opinions. He is a denizen of the Florida swamps, whither he repairs during a part of the summer to ecstatically spend his time wallowing in the mud and playing "Peckaboo, I see you" with the darling little moccasins. As umbrageous spots are rather scarce, he comes back to us each September brown as a nut (more the color of a pecan than a butternut). For his honesty and wisdom of judgment he was chosen chairman of the ring committee, and you have but to gaze upon the exquisite masterpiece with which each '16 man's hand is adorned (and also that of a fair maid or two) to see conclusive evidence of his efficiency. We are sure that the world will hear of this young man, for his character, supported by his willingness to work, prophesy for him the career of a celebrity.

THIRD CLASS: Private Co. "A"; Class Baseball.

SECOND CLASS: Sergeant Co. "A"; Marshal

FIRST CLASS: Private Co. "E"; Varsity Track;
Marshal Final German.

AFTER an inspection tour of nearly every school in the United States, "Monte" entered V. M. I. to escape the pen, and now wishes he hadn't. From the day that his beautiful smile lightened the gloom of barracks, "J. Evan" desired above all things to wear a sword, but, alas, his fond dreams were shattered when he lost his chevrons. "Jo-Jo" gets a new calic every hop, but the climax was reached when, after one hop, he was caught trying to get freight rates on mail matter in car-load lots to Danville. Sad to say, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder"—for the other fellow, and now his biscuits have been cut in many slices. He missed his calling when he took Electricity, however; he was born to be a Liberal Artist, for he can take a word and draw it out into an all-night yarn. "Monte" is ambitious to enter the Army, and we expect to see him carrying the coveted sword some day. The best wishes of his friends and smitten calic will follow him wherever he goes.

"For the love of Mike, Mutt, be reasonable."

HAILING from the uncharted river which Compton bridges, our friend "Madam" ruined her reputation at the beginning by rooming with the "Kink." Since those eventful days many men has she dwelled with; but few have been able to put up with her long, until her present partners in sorrow, taking pity on her because of the harshness of barracks, consented to receive their "Sister" into the haven of 99-B. To repay this kindness "Billy" showers them with her favors, and offers to make all concerned extremely athletic, she being a strong believer in the "New Woman." As was but fitting, "Billy" kept her feet in the straight and narrow way until a recent Christmas, when the rain probably caused her to slip from her seat. After the fireworks, "Sister" took all duty, swearing she had a bad cold, but we "hac our doots." She advocates the theory that "the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world," supporting her opinion against great opposition in the shape of No. 11 shoes. But, taking her all in all, our "Madam" has only one bad habit—she smokes

"Oh, the hell you predominate!"

DIVINELY tall and most divinely fair," large of limb and most beautifully fashioned. Might well be likened to the egg whereon the ostrich sits. One gloomy day in the year of disaster the sentinel on post was heard to laugh out loud, exclaiming: "Look what the cat drug in!" Our hero, blushing modestly, acknowledged the introduction and proceeded to make himself at home. The acquisition of indiscriminate knowledge became his ambition, for which he spends many hours of diligent slumber. Having acquired all there was to know about electricity, he sighed for more worlds to conquer. Obedient to this craving, he realized his ideals in the new course, otherwise known as "Cots and Covers." Like all men of great learning, "Jape" is a bit absent-minded. One Christmas while making lemonade (?) he carelessly laid his finger on the table and tried to cut it off. Whatever profession will grace his services we have not the imagination to picture, but we'll go you the limit on this—he makes good.

BEHOLD this "Wrath of God," who is characterized by his ever-present hard luck raised to the *n*th power. This is indicated not only by the way he crapped out in No. 54, but by his untimely attendance of the W. and L. hops. He says that he never appreciated the 40's until after his first Saturday afternoon in the guardhouse. But when these memories overwhelm him, all that is necessary to bring the sunshine to his otherwise solemn countenance is to mention "Baltimore Smile." Then, "Merci," what a change! So, after all, she may deserve his golden shower of affection. History is rather hazy as to his Rathood, but the Guard Tree has witnessed many of his struggles and defeats up until the time he fortified his position with Liberal Arts. So safe and secure does he feel behind this barrier that he spreads his downy couch with regularity at 2 00 p. m. with only one precaution—"Wake me up at 4 o'clock, will you, Paul?" Somehow "Percy" has acquired the idea that the Army needs improving, and after his graduation he expects to be among those present when General Wood calls the roll. But no matter what he may do, we feel sure that he will manage to get rid of his persistent "jinx."

JOE is ambitious. And this is just about half. The other half is that he usually gets what he goes after. He wanted to put out the best Cadet that the Institute has ever had, and he did—not by accident, but through his ability and work. In fact, he is the editor of two papers. The other comes out every other day and is mailed to Pittsburgh. "Eddie" is "hard away" after an intellect. Most any time you can find him at the library devouring Browning or somebody's "Life of Gladstone." Why, he reads this stuff like a Third Classman does the "Parisienne"! Also, he is always ready for any scheme that G2 can devise, and this is going some. And when he dances—O Bucyrus! He took enough lessons to break and maneuver a calie to the door, and then—look out for your Biscuits if he has them, for here is where this Liberal Artist shines. He is a natural-born organizer and big dog in the literary societies. We are looking forward to some day purchasing a set of his works. So 'ere's to you, "Joe." Remember that the wishes of your many friends are that some day you may attain your "Climax."

HIS sedate personage from the hills of Virginia became real popular a very few minutes after he matriculated, for his name is not an unknown one amongst cadets. His great pastime is boasting how he turned down a serjeantcy and handed it over to his friend "Guy." He is a veritable lion among the ladies—his correspondence is sufficient proof. "Coz" demonstrated to his roommates one night his ability as a cat tamer when about two o'clock in the morning he was awakened by a sham battle among the members of the Feline Family. No cadet in all barracks has such a figure as he possesses, for when he struts about the Institute he reminds one of a "Boxing Kangaroo," and he was known to fall once and rock himself to sleep. We have been unsuccessful in our efforts to get all of the country dialect out of him. He is a follower of "Monk," and some day we expect to pass Brandy Station and find it so illuminated that one might think it Broadway. Here's to you, "Coz," hoping that your success will be as great as it has been at your Alma Mater.

"T. M."

FOUR years ago this Vernon Castle the Second decided to leave his native haunts of Upperville, Va., and acquire some hard-earned knowledge at V. M. I. This he has not succeeded in doing—hence his nickname, "Hawf Wit." He struts around 18 by the hour, with a campaign hat where his brains ought to be, swearing that he is going to be an officer in the Field Artillery; but as "a battery seen is a battery destroyed," he hasn't much chance—especially on account of his radiant complexion. He is known by the fair sex as an easy mark, throwing class rings promiscuously around the floor and dancing the "jitney roll" with the most idyllic expression of beatitude. He is very fond of a combination of Rudyard Kipling and the Smoky City, but in the summer time he is in his prime, following the hounds on his favorite burro. Being a follower of "T. Jones, Virginia," he is sure to come out on top in the end, and he will always be welcome wherever he goes—especially to the calic. Go get 'em, Harry.

HIS the only First Classman who tells the truth about what he does, and doesn't care who knows. The "Kike" goes hog wild about "the light that shines in woman's eyes," and in its bright glow great "Gladness" can be seen to envelop him. It's lucky that he doesn't want a dip, for the requirements for a diploma are: "elementary mathematics and a little English, History, and Geology," none of which could be developed into a thesis by the "Kike." He has the handiest ear in the world—it can be made to go deaf by pressing a certain rib, and when he so desires he's off to Lynchburg. The bell-hops say: "Yessah, Mr. "Ike," right upstairs, suh." Oh, he's renowned, all right. He learned to love his home town this summer, and talked about it for weeks, until the lotus food that we eat took effect, so that last year's doings become as a dream. We feel sure that he will come out of the big end of the horn, if the little end is too small; but what he does when he comes out is most doubtful—yet full of Gladness, I reckon.

BEHOLD "John Barleycorn" Dillard—at least with the aid of a magnifying glass. This startling likeness was obtained by an ingenious combination of microscope and photograph lens designed especially for the occasion. "Dogie" was an exceedingly cute Rat, and was taken for an A. D. T. boy when he reported in short breeches to the O. D. Since then micrometer measurements show his development nearly 0024 of an inch. This represents his growth in stature only—nothing can gauge his growth as a calic's man. It is on record that one lady said: "Oh, that Mr. Dillard! Every time I see him I want to take him on my lap and cuddle him." Also, "d c" thinks he is running a branch of the Lexington P. O. in 99-B, judging from the gross excess of passionately tinted mail he both sends and receives. "Dogie" is a highbrow of highbrows, making an 8.8 on one exam when afflicted with an excruciating headache, which barred him from all but eight hours' study. Lastly, "Soap" seems to think that he is a combination phonograph and steam calliope, although he couldn't carry a tune in a bucket, and only whistles "Aloha Oe" off the key. Truth forces us to add that the Fishes have nothing on him.

THE unlucky year 1913 ushered into our midst a Rat who hails from nowhere, in fact, but he informed us by his facial characteristics that even if he resembled a crust of pie he was sure to leave a noble impression on all who came in contact with him. His favorite pastime is sitting in his room writing lengthy epistles, and Du knows that the mail has missed connection if Guy does not get his daily message. He tells his friends that "Brigadier-General" Drewry is the man who runs this post, and if Harry could hear him command he would not have him knocking a "stone-crusher." The "Lone Wolf" can be seen strolling on the streets of Lexington at all hours when not writing orders, and it is a sure fact that if he should reveal the happenings on these eventful journeys they would disclose things of a really surprising nature. After a few minutes' study, his feet perched high above his head, he will toss his book aside and hastily exclaim: "It is mighty soft!" Expects to found an "N" and "D" Academy in which the courses of Domestic Science and Electrical Engineering will be taught

"That's pretty soft."

ON the second of September, four years ago, there appeared in the doorway of 103 a cigarette, followed by the above specimen. One glance is sufficient to show that he is from Southwest Virginia and a follower of "Tommy." What he can do with a transit would fill numerous volumes similar to those containing the Life History of Alexander the Great, and he has been heard to say upon several occasions that with a little application he could easily stand with "Sherlock" and "Kink." While a Rat, his ability to whistle "Home, Sweet Home" with his nose placed against that of a brother Rat, and of maintaining his equilibrium while coasting in a bowl, won him everlasting renown. We wonder, when a Third Classman, why he made frequent trips to 9-B on Saturday nights, and how he always seemed to know when to "look at 'em." If in the future he uses his head as he has here, the Class feels certain that he will be a credit to the Institute. We wish you luck, P. Duncan from Jonesville.

HE man with a thousand hearts. All a calic has to do is to stomp on his foot, say "Damn!" and he is hers—until another sings him some wild and woolly song. After two years at Annapolis and color-blindness, "Army" came to V. M. I. as a Second Class Rat. Here he has distinguished himself as a leader, an excellent manager, and an orator upon whom the Dialectic Society always falls back when up against a knot. "Our Hero" is the god of all Third Classmen, and any one rushing into a room after tattoo that seemed to hold much excitement, judging from the crowd assembled, would find "Army" haranguing the "newly-old" cadets. He is the ideal Liberal Artist; give him an idea and he will talk all night on it—or write an eighteen-page special delivery to North Carolina. Durant's ambition is still in Navy circles, and he expects eventually to parade Uncle Sam's poop deck with a sword in one hand and a bottle of grape juice in the other. He will be there, too, for what he wants he usually gets.

Furthermore, being a Liberal Artist, he cares not whether he hits the hay at 1:30 or 2:00 p. m., but he manages to find time to keep up with the latest fiction and the snappiest plays from his old stamping-ground, Broadway. He occasionally exhibits some of the Bowery stuff, as when he tried to bite a hockey stick in two. The "King" hopes to illuminate the world by becoming the chief consulting engineer of the Westinghouse people. Is a diligent follower of "Monk," and aspires some day to be able to tell "if an ampere turns will a voltmeter or not?" That, however, is of minor importance compared to his musical ability. He is often heard singing, "I wonder who's kissing her now," and the Blanc(he) expression on his countenance is really pathetic. During his Second Class year his hopes of becoming a second Napoleon were shattered when he was placed under arrest for "allowing inflammable matter tied to cat's tail to be lighted in first stoop annex." K NOW all men and women by these presents, that the above was not as meek as generally supposed. One of his greatest pleasures in his First Class year was to entice Third Classmen to 78, where he showed them the skillful use of bayonet, broom, or plank. This was his only form of dissipation, but between rev and B. R. C. he became a holy terror, putting up his hay, cussing his roommates for not putting up theirs, and occasionally throwing a little cold water at his face. Body and soul he is wrapped up in the "Order of the Private," having seen three years' service as such at A. M. A. and three here. What he'll do when he leaves here is undecided, but he is contemplating entering the militia, where he hopes some day to become a "corp." And from B. R. LO and behold, ye children of Israel! We are sending forth into your midst "Itchie the Famous." He was thrust upon us one bright day in September of the year nineteen-thirteen. The strength of "Itchie" was noticed upon his arrival at the Arch—his grip overflowing with pumpernickel, sauerkraut, and wienies. The fact that he is a true son of Israel was shown in several cases. His immediate refusal to buy the radiator in his room more than confirmed his ancestry. Entering as a Third Class Rat, he soon became efficient and looked forward to becoming an Officer of the Guard, after finding that he was too "small" to be First Captain. As an O. G. he is very good, except that he gets excited and gives "Half price" instead of "Half step." HIS bird of the wilderness migrated from his Reed Island home in the fall of 1912. When he reached Lexington he joined a flock of his own species and wintered there. It has been a habit of his for the last four years. For the first few summers he flew home, but he was finally persuaded by his flock to make an overland flight to the springs. Here he learned to drink alum water and handle bones like a vulture. As a First Classman he was Captain of the Hay Team, attaining this over Liberal Artists because of the many more difficulties he had to contend with. He gave most of his time to the team, spending the rest in warming up for the nightly set-back tournaments. In these he was champion, being the only man to hold the championship of 78 for five consecutive days. The most prized of his possessions is his peace pipe, which he uses to quiet his temper if by chance his eyes fall on his book of alternating currents.

IN Texas there's a stream (?). This stream is called the Sabine. On the banks of the Sabine is a metropolis (?). This is called Greenville. Or, if you can't figure it out from that, just say it's near Dallas and let it go at that. He joined Sixteen in September, 1912, and with ours and Major P. Foot's tender care he has been with us ever since. Don't think that "Corp" ever was one. His sleeve has never been soiled with chevrons, but some men sure do get rolled! Ole Rat induced him to follow the analysers, and for two years he has been engaged in making all kinds of mixtures and odors. Rather careless of me, but I almost forgot his fiddle. He brought it with him, and, although threats to break it over his head have often been made, he still has it. This love of music led him to the hops in his Rat year. He's changed, though, and now from a safe distance views the calic and passes judgment—either "keen" or "gross." What's he going to do? I don't know that, but just keep your eyes on him, and if he doesn't blow himself up, some of the alchemists will be turning over in their graves.

FROM the mud-bedecked banks of the Panama Canal there issued forth one sunshiny day a meek, sandy-haired, blue-eyed youth. He bade farewell to the hairy tarantula and various other insects characteristic of that tropical zone, and with a heavy heart departed for V. M. I. Ship and train transported him safely to us. Thrown so suddenly upon the world, his meekness soon departed, and ere long he blossomed forth in all his glory, the very embodiment of confident and glorious young manhood! Many are his goodly qualities, and many are his bad. Most unfortunately, he has a spark of genius in his diminutive brain, and, like many such geniuses, disdains work. But at times, when not engaged in the perusal of the "Parisienne" or other examples of our modern literature, he may be seen lost to the world under a mountain of letters which exude all the varieties of perfume known to the Beau Brummelistic world. Then we know that Peter is adding one more to his long list of conquests. Besides being able to run forty miles under stimulation of a few boxes of Piedmonts, Peter is a talented linguist and musician, being able to torture "linked sweetness, long drawn out," from an ocharina and perform on a flute at the same time.

His best friend is the "Doctor," with whom he takes long rides each week. As an athlete "Rock" has made himself famous, being for four years one of the mainstays on the baseball team. Some say that his skill is due to his ears, as nothing can get past them. He also handles a tennis racket with great dexterity. He is the only living man who has had the distinction of giving "form sections" at D. R. C. Victor Reese says he has a calic, but the only proof we have is an occasional letter from Mary Baldwin Seminary. "Rock" has that rare faculty, the handling of men. He can stir the Corps into a fury or calm the men by some quaint remark. He is a follower of "Tommy," and is sure to make a success in any walk of life in which he chooses to wander.

HIS large mass of humanity, it appears, was predestined to have a career of prominence from the beginning. The first fire-drill he attended saw the beginning of his fame. At the sound of fire-call he grabbed his broom, and, with martial tread, strode to his company, broom at the right shoulder. On being questioned, he came to present arms, and said he was going to fan out the flames. He was decorated for bravery under fire. With this dare-devil nature still raging in him he selected Electricity and pursued it diligently—that is, when he was not writing to some girl met on a football trip, or playing set back. His title of "War Hoss" was gained in football, but his real athletic ability was shown when he went in as a pinch hitter and secured the pitcher's goat. Moreover, it is well known in barracks that he can handle two Third Classmen and a bayonet, shave, and play a trombone all at the same time.

IT will not be clear to every one what this is, but to a student of zoölogy it is easily seen to be an insect, or, in other words, a "skeeter." He rose like Cytherea from the Nile and entered V. M. I. with the other Wharf Rats from Norfolk. He came into prominence as a Rat when in a class football game he got away with some ten-second work for a touchdown. However, on the next play some mighty First Classman sat on him, and "Skeeter" has never buzzed on the gridiron since. After his Rat year he became famous as running against "Mutt" Loth for president of the Ananias Club. He tells the gullible keydets of the fairest of the fair that have entered his adventurous life, and speaks of "marvelous" letters to prove his high standing at Hollins. He swears that he will be a rear-admiral, and that he will never allow a member of the fair sex to ensnare his affections. HIS "Sleuth," the first Rat in the class to matriculate, got an early start on the rest of the Misters and has managed to maintain this lead in many respects. At first he was like all Rats, but at makeovers in his Third Class year he found himself the possessor of the proud distinction of "First Corp." and the following spring he won more glory as a pinch hitter in a class game. He cast his lot with the Civil lunch, and has ever since been "Tommy's" pride and joy. At this time he first began to exhibit his gliding abilities and to manifest great interest in the fair sex, with the result that a constant line of communication has since been held with Staunton. Is a firm believer in the barracks' maxim that "All work and no play will help me get my clip—some day," and has diligently tried to enforce this rule on those who dwell on the second stoop. Says he is going to be a railroad man, and if he is we are sure that some day he will be at the top—and not of some side-door pullman, either. Luck to yer, "Sherlock"!

BEHOLD, a real German! The blue blood of Prussia yet flows in his veins, but V. M. I. is ever famed for its democracy, and we had to let him enter. "King" has the art of working to a science: he is always working, and yet he never seems to be busy. Among the results of this is first stand in his class, a couple of medals, the best baseball schedule (and trips) we've ever had, and, above all, the heart of a fair demoiselle—this last, we claim, is the greatest accomplishment of them all. "King" was ever quite a "Handy" Rat, and as a Corporal just too "thweet" for anything. In his full dike he now looks like "Mc und Gott." Another thing we like about "Kink" is the way he has of imitating your cab's voice; for just when you are getting ready to dive into the slough of despond, with a few of those matchless words like those of the sweetest girl in the world, he wins you back from yourself. Heigh-ho! Whatever profession he enters he will adorn, because—

"King" is a guy

THIS remarkable, beaming, jovial somebody rolled into barracks sometime previous to the first epoch of the new prehistoric stone age. From this statement you can take it for granted that "Mutt" is no spring rooster. Dear reader, if you should turn over a few pages you would see that our portly cherub now holds no less an office than president of the Founders Club. The height of "Mutt's" career was reached however, in that memorial Third Class year of 1913. Here "Mutt" distinguished himself as a master bomb thrower, and the rest of the story is one of sad lamentation. Our hero next appears donning the blue of the Naval Academy, but, sad to relate, he led the authorities such a merry chase and made things so interesting in general that competition for his position as champion "Jimmy Leg" dodger was feared. "Mutt" returned to us last year, but, oh, such a change! He is verily now a boy of sweet disposition, having cast aside his air of being a Third Classman. However, he still carries his recognized ability as the proverbial Mexican Athlete. Here's to "Mutt"—he is only equaled by his brother "Jeff"!

LOOK once and turn away! It came from Orange and caught us in 1913. Oh, where's Orange? I dunno, but he says it's near the C. and O. "chicken station." I'll take his word for it. No, he's not much of a social flower. But listen! He has missed one—only one—hop since he's been a keydet, and then he was home showing his little country calic bow nice he looked in his uniform. "Chappie" caught him in the hay, and he's been there ever since. If his captor only knew that he had robbed the P. R. R. of a future General Manager he would perhaps be willing to release him. Then, again, such is the training for great lawyers, senators, and even Presidents. I'm afraid, though, that Lynnvillie, with its mill, power-plant, and little girl, will be honored with his presence after June 22d. Whoever gets him will be lucky, for they will get a good-natured, wide-awake specimen—he's had sleep enough in the last two years to last him a lifetime, so we know that he will max it up, whatever his future undertaking may be.

NO, gentlemen, the above is not Napoleon, or "Auld Nick," either, although we are sure that his military aspirations are just as high. Would rather have a little authority than anything else in the world. Some one called him the most unofficial official O. D. at V. M. I. Has a great deal of sense for one so young, but to hear his childish giggle at all times one would never think it. Dearly loves Virginia (don't think he will ever go anywhere else). Is the recipient of numerous news notes and weather reports from Hampton. Dances with only one calic at the hops—then every other dance and all breaks. This young Adonis carries great responsibility on his shoulders, because, besides being Business Manager of two publications, Company Commander, and Division Inspector, he is always neglecting his work trying to get "Ike" to show him how to make love. His greatest ambition for after-life is to join the Masons.

ONCE upon a time in the dim and distant past, when the Guard Tree was planted, or Cheops deprived the pyramid builders of First Class privileges for painting the Sphinx, Oscar Lyle drove a load of hay in front of barracks and offered it in exchange for tuition. He soon became sophisticated, however, and from the first moment that he stepped on the diamond he steadily rose in fame and popularity until both had reached the enviable proportions which the above record attests. It is rumored that he was compelled to spend his first summer furlough as an Electrical Engineer in the backwoods of Virginia in order to hide from the Big League scouts, while the points he made single-handed in one game of football led one sporting editor to consider him for the All-Southern team. "Buddy" has also an irresistibly magnetic personality. When he says, "Buddy, you are a good fellow," you feel that you are one; and the opinion of the fair sex may be summed up in the words of one of their number: "I just think Lyle McCormick is the grandest thing, and he is so good-looking, too!"

Sad to say, his hopes along the former line were shattered in his Third Class year by his fondness for throwing Mess Hall biscuits through windows. As a chemist, though, "Hoot Mon" is a wonder—doesn't believe in getting anything less than a 9.99. To look at his noble brow one would never believe "Ph. D." to be a ladies' man, but don't be deceived—he is reputed to be there with bells on. Never believed much in dancing till his First Class year, when he decided that in order to keep up with the other heart-smashers he must improve in "tripping the light fantastic." With the stick-to-it-iveness characteristic of him, he has become quite a male Terpsichore. He is planning to show the boys how to do it at the remaining hops; and as for the ladies' hearts—watch 'em roll at his little (??) feet. TIS said that "Venus" first sought barracks as a refuge from art collectors. Certain it is, however, that he is vastly popular with the fair sex, and when he smiles down from his dizzying heights at one of their number at a hop, saying, "You are looking awful sweet to-night," he is simply irresistible. This popularity is only surpassed by his unerring business instinct and utter originality, especially in Military Science. He has made a fortune in barracks on lockboxes, belts, and the like, and has even started sub-agencies, while strange things happen at Guard Mounting when he is O. G. But, all joking aside, Craig is one of the best of fellows, and, while he is not overburdened with brilliant mentality, he is a living example of the proverb that genius consists of one part inspiration and nine parts perspiration.

THERE is something in his map I admire, and oftentimes long to step on it, but can't. It's under his nose. Don't worry, "Jap," we can't all be born both beautiful and rich, and many have neither "sense" nor beauty. His nature is rather vacillating, for his mood varies from extreme "ignitizness" to deep retrospection, when he has been known to sit for hours at a time listening to Conway's Band render "The Rosary" on the Victrola. He's almost well now, and we think there is a chance for him. In his infancy he failed to see the light, but remained in Stygian darkness, and now spends most of his time glaring at his "electric lighting" and muttering: "Don't it can." In spite of the fact that he doesn't know the difference between alternating currents and alternating Military Science—where there's life there's hope, and "Jasper's" not dead yet. The one thing against him is that he is not aware that windows in the back of automobiles are transparent, but next time—well, experience is a mighty good teacher. His aspirations are limited (Danville is the limit), but his success is a certainty, for he is so unusual.

His favorite pastime is chasing the Dutchman around the table when he gets "horsed." His favorite expression is "By Bum!" which he came into possession of through his attendance at a show in the swell Lyric Theater of Lexington. His habits of meekness and obedience still persist, although at times he rages even as a mean Third Classman toward some poor, unoffending Mister. As a performer on the flute he excels Pan, for while that individual could charm the beasts, our "Governor" even enchants a pole. Bad habits he has only two—a great fondness for fresh air, thereby causing him to rush uptown whenever First Class permit is turned out, and the frightful dissipation pertaining to a No. 10 pipe with his roommate's tobacco therein. Warranted to be the only man who can't tell H₂O from witch hazel, buying the latter with great generosity for his roommates, while he uses the former in his nocturnal shaves. Finally, the "Governor's" winning ways and merry laugh will land him one day in the gubernatorial chair at "St. Christmas," provided, of course, that some one doesn't step on him in the interim.

THIS one of our number is verily a shining light—with the ladies. He is a love pirate, flirt, sweeter—but the ladies all pronounce him charming, so there you are. He knows more Lexington calic, both East and West, than any two men in the Corps. Has never been known to miss a hop; but on one occasion was found occupying the rear seat of an automobile just outside for 17 consecutive dances. We wonder why he doesn't take up a special course in biology, for he is deeply interested in "Nats," making flying trips to "Graham's" on the eve of exams in the search of same. If his thirst for knowledge was as great as his thirst for other things he would be a highbrow. But alas! he believes in living up to his motto: "Much study is wearisome to the flesh." He sits around, consumes calic paper and Piedmonts, plays the mandolin, studies the principle of "least work," and wonders when he can get over to "Bueny" again. Once it were written that he becometh known as Sir Sergeant, but ere long he is as those who are busted. But nay, he careth not, and journeys to Richmond, a distant land, where he maketh merry with all damsels. And it is said that even he caused one to slip from grace and fall beneath yon table while he sippeth the juice of limes. And then he returneth to his native land, where he breaketh forth into a fiery scribe and denounceth all editors of ye daily papers, even though he receiveth much censure from them. Yea, he be even a man of brawn, and fightest four winters with ye Pigskin on yon hill. Finally he becometh as those who be mightiest, and he weareth the honored symbol on his breast. QUESTION: Why did Lindsay decline the presidency of the First Class and take Chemistry, claiming that everything was too much trouble, and then, regularly twice a week, proceed to throw his cape over his shoulder with all the ease and grace of a Roman senator and patrol the lower road until tattoo? He says he has a Gay old time, and yet swears he isn't the craziest occupant of 108. The "S. Is most fascinating when he puts "Home, Sweet Home" on the Victrola and sighs that his calie must love him, because she sent him a Christmas card. Only time he ever showed a yellow streak was when he backed out of taking dancing lessons, and he still trembles violently, walls his eyes, and backs his ears when any one says "Hops." IN writing the lives of great men one has to mention the great man's attitude towards Nature and living creatures. I don't know the attitude of the above towards Nature, but I do know that he loves living creatures, especially Kittens. He has pictures of them—some tall ones, too. He's rather crazy at rev (most of us are, for that matter), but at other times he's sensible—until breakfast. He and Joe Collins are the only ones in the Liberal Arts' section credited with brains, which, of course, is not saying much, but in the minds of the other Artists this covers a lot of territory. "Our Editor" would much rather Read than Wright (spell that write right). This is unintelligible to the vast public, but what they don't know won't hurt them. Young Read's ambitions are not high, as a rule, but at times they soar into the millions—and then fluctuate to a "big un." E almost missed him—not quite. This specimen of Danish hare was hot on the trail of '16 and caught up with it sometime in January, 1913. Like good brother Rats we comforted and consoled him until June, and, with Major P. Foot's aid and the alum treatment, he has been with us ever since. He had aspirations for the distinction of a Corporalship when Tim called him into his private car returning from Richmond. Two weeks later and his hopes fell through. Since then he has adorned the ranks with his trusty musket. When the call for recruits came in the fall of 1914 he fell in with "Tommy's" squad and "went to the board" and "drew figgers." Since then he has had many chances to use his jumping abilities—sometimes aiming at what seemed a crip, but alas! Nevertheless, he has made good, and when the "time of dips" arrives "Benedict" will be one of those to answer "Here." It would be useless to dwell on his charms in the eyes of the opposite sex. IT is with the greatest difficulty that we attempt to conjure a fitting eulogy for one with a career such as has been that of James C. Sansberry. From the lowest order of manhood, a benighted V. M. I. Rat, he has attained by leaps and bounds that enviable throne from which the mighty First Classman, sitting in austere dignity, looks down upon the striving subordinate masses. Not satisfied with this, his inordinate desire for power has made him one of the chosen six among this worthy assemblage. But not only in this have his desires been realized, for in him are found not only the qualities of a scholar and a commander, but those passions which prompted Leander to undertake nightly his arduous task in the Hellespont. In the absence of this famous body of water, our subtle young hero conceived of the remarkable expedient of breaking his collar bone ever and anon. We know not what may be his career when he leaves us, but this warning we issue to the motley populace with which our fair land is inhabited: "Beware, ye Ladies and ye Captains of Industry!"

HERE is one of the rarest specimens ever thrust upon us. We will be a long time forgiving the State of Pennsylvania. How long he has been here we would hate to say; even "Bull Rat John" doesn't remember when he arrived. After having been with us a number of years he founded and became president of what is known as "The Ancient Order of the Sons of Rest." He looked the courses over at the beginning of his Second Class year, and this is one time when he showed good judgment and joined the tribe of "Chappie." Since then his life has been one long dream. If the conversation ever happens to lag with "Dutch," just mention the Army and you will learn more in a minute than General Wood could tell you in a week. Until recently he has been successful in dodging the many darts from Cupid's bow thrown in his direction, but, alas, he got in the way of one, and what a fall! Every Sunday afternoon he can be seen making for the vicinity of the post-office. If you see a quiet-looking individual, rather scanty of hair, but with an enormous chip on his shoulder, why, that is "Major." And don't you touch that chip, for others have done it, and a rise in undertaking stock immediately followed. He has been a star member of every boxing class that ever existed, and it is said that he melted into tears when Jess Willard got at Jack Johnson before he had the opportunity. His ambitions are in accord with his character, for he is the most enthusiastic "Armyoodle" in barracks, dividing his time between reading War Department books and sending countless letters to Montgomery, Ala. We sincerely hope that this pugnacious person will realize his ambitions and get into a fight large enough to satisfy his appetite, filling a position as officer in the service as well as he did at V. M. I.

HIS diminutive specimen hails from the back alleys and byways of Baltimore, and is of a very ferocious nature. He joined us by the Third Class route, after having exhausted the perils and adventures of his native village. When he arrived he got through the Arch all right by dint of turning his head and much squeezing of the latter part, but then came the real trouble—his first cadet cap. Well, they got one for him in a couple of weeks! Lefty Louie and Dago Frank in their prime never had a thing on our "Tommy," for the way he wields a gun causes his roommates to frequently seek shelter behind the bedrolls, and though he poses as a first-aid leader, from the size of the gun he keeps we think that he should join P. I.'s artillery detail. His aspirations are to join Uncle Sam's cavalry, but as yet he is not tall enough to reach the stirrup.

OW-DE-DO, Cultivator of the Guard Tree! How is it that all your letters have the postmark of "Buena"? And "how come" you have to sit up until 1 00 P. M. to answer those Hollins College Pink Sheets? Kind reader, you see that "our man Hawkins" doesn't spend quite all of his time tampering with the typewriter, making tea, holding Thé Dansants after taps, or constructing improvements in 40-C for the comforts of "Lem" and "Shorty." The directors of the Jefferson County Savings Bank are kept in a state of perpetual anxiety over his next financial move, and there is a noticeable difference in the stock of that company after one of "Slip's" all-night sessions. He is in his glory, and his self-esteem rises 99 per cent, when he mounts with great pomp to Officer of the Guard. He can be heard to command in stentorian tones: "Maj-ah Groover-r-r, execute my following orders with dignity, rapidity, and what-not." He expects to be an "industrial promoter," and, if unlimited popularity and sincerity of action be of any value, we predict for him absolute success.

SOMEONE has said, "The dumb can never rise," but "B" does not agree with him. Another saying is, "The truth hurts," which accounts for his non-agreement. He takes great pleasure in referring to himself as "the Old Man," because he is so feeble. He is feeble, too, for after a lot of groaning and cussing he gets up bent almost double; by supper he has straightened slightly, and can be seen any time of the day or night slouching along the first stoop. It is rumored that he has a monopoly out under the Academic Building, a rumor certified to be true by certain Rats who have had to linger in the cold after rev. Although the town where he lives contains only five inhabitants, nothing has ever happened in the world that has not transpired in Franklin. Sent fifty-nine telegrams just to see a Horse fall, but failed. Is a chronic B-acher, never feels well, and is always unhappy except when monopolizing his monopoly. NEXT to those of Archie Nelm's "Boli's" nether extremities approximate an ellipse more closely than anything of their kind in barracks. Yes, alack, he is low-legged, but a warm heart beats under those second-hand gray breeches. We can state this even though he affects a fetching pair of tortoise-shell goggles with which he lures susceptible and unsuspecting calic into his cynical toils. He treasures three bewitching blondish whiskers, which have recurred so persistently in spite of monthly shaves that they are now tacitly accepted as tried and true comrades and lovingly treated as such. Oh, yes, "Boli" has something else—a conscience. He invariably bootlicks this handy article by taking an Economics book to the hay with him of afternoons, ostensibly for study, and sometimes he stays awake long enough to charge a Vanity Fair when Doc comes around. Sh! listen, this is something I promised not to tell—though he has led a sheltered life, our hero, armed with an A. B. degree (besprinkled with certain other initials), paints a future with colors as vivid as those he used in George's Third Class decoration. We fear the worst, but so be it, and God bless you, "Robin."

AND so it happened that Zeus called unto him Hephaistus and said unto him: "Fashion me one of massive proportions who shall dwell on earth, irreproachable of the baseness of mankind." And the lord of fire did the great god's bidding. He moulded him a perfect youth, but in one foot did he apply the fire too long, and thus it happened that gout came to be in his massive frame. But Zeus was pleased, and said: "I name thee "Tony" Zea. Go thou down amongst men and abide thou where men labor hardest." And "Tony" descended from Olympus and saw men moving ever about with burdens on their shoulders and books of knowledge in their hands. Thus did "Tony" come amongst the dwellers of King Nick's realm. Here did he mighty feats of strength with his arms, but the athletes of the land were lither in their lower limbs. And through his innocent mien was he chosen chieftain of the Y. M. C. A., and he did once journey o'er the land that all men might see what manner of men dwelled in the halls of King Nick. After many labors did he journey to the fair land of Strasburg, where it is the will of Zeus that he remain in peace and quietness all his days, bringing joy to those about him and filling the land with plenty.

THE BOMB

A Synonym

There were calic by the Statue,
There were calic by the Arch,
And the First Class swarmed around them
In paletots stiff with starch.

There were some who read the orders,
There were some who read the sheet
That hangs by Harry's doorway,
Nemesis that none can beat.

One keydet showed his calic
Where his name was on the leaf,
And she blushed and looked quite furious—
Actions strange beyond belief.

She promptly left that keydet,
She returned his miniature—
He was flabbergasted, foozled—
He took it without demur.

He stared at that delinquency,
But he still is wondering why;
For he'd been boned for simply this—
"Dust in ch—magazine S. E. 1."

1st FIRST CLASS

A History

OUR years ago ninety-eight scared, dumb, hopeless-looking Misters fanned out on these historic stoops; to-day there are twenty-nine left to don paletots or enfold themselves in capes and leave nonchalantly on First Class permit. The whole class, however, boasts fifty-nine members, due to the fact that we drew a number of Third Class rats and were boarded by a crew of "X's" who are determined to leave here with something besides a class ring and a flock of deficiencies. As a matter of fact, we are all making a more or less desperate effort to become A. B.'s or B. S.'s (either applies to the Liberal Artists); and, consequently, have clothed ourselves in that mantle of reserve and dignity so becoming to and characteristic of the V. M. I. First Classman.

To hark back many eons to our rathood days, we often solemnly hold forth on the horrible tortures inflicted on us by those heartless brutes of Third Classmen. And yet we brag about the praiseworthy escapades we engaged in after becoming Third Classmen ourselves—in other words, after becoming young nihilists, with a generous portion of the irresponsibility of a two-year-old mixed with the meanness of a Sioux Indian full of deviltry and fire-water! Our Second Class Year was filled with the reality of possession of the beloved class ring, dreams of roseate hue anent the Final Ball, and agonized efforts to get through "by the grace of God and the oversight of the Faculty." And now we have reached the station in (barracks) life where our actions constitute the criterion for those of others, where we are the embodiment of limitless wisdom, where we are the power behind the delinquency sheet, magnanimous though commanding, our manner having a slight touch of hauteur withal—in short, when, as he who disapproves our furloughs and is “the father of nearly four hundred bad boys” would say, we are thought more of (and think more of ourselves) than we ever will be again during our careers!

After this lengthy preamble, we needs must “lay off the Liberal Arts’ stuff” and come back to earth in order to be intelligible to the Civil, Electrical, and Chemistry men; which reminds us that never before has there been such rivalry between the courses. The Civil men stand aloof, preserving a sort of armed neutrality, and look forward to a future of digging ditches with calm self-satisfaction. The Electrical man should turn out some first-rate plumbers, but their conceit is positively unbearable. We mention the Chemistry men only out of consideration for their feelings—cheer up, you all, there are lots of good places for enterprising young men at Hopewell and the leading drugstores. We pause in dismay upon attempting a description of the Artists—nobody knows what’s going to happen to them. They claim in flowery language that future Cabinets, Senates, Wall Street syndicates, and the transcendently æsthetic literary circles will be largely composed of their number; but we wish to observe that there are plenty of vacancies for drivers’ positions on those vehicles that pass barracks about eleven o’clock every night, each dipped in honey and “wasting its sweetness on the desert air.”

In class athletics Sixteen has met with some terrible luck. As Rats and Second Classmen, for instance, the basket-ball tie was not played off, and in both cases the “dope” was all on Sixteen to win. “John” Pitts annexed the Williamson-Graham cup last year, and is again the mainstay of all three teams. In Varsity football, "John" Pitts, "Buddie" McCormick, "Teddy Bear" Heflin, "Hardin" Massie, "John Gray" Paul, and "George" Snead received well-earned monograms, while "Murphy" Fechheimer, "B. D." Ayres, "Frank" Zea, "Lindsay" Pitts, and "Mutt" Loth played hard and faithfully on the scrubs. In basket-ball, "John" Pitts played his steady, reliable game at guard and was Captain of the team, while "Buck" Lewis played a pretty game all season at center. For four years, the "Big Four," "Rock" Gillespie, John and Lindsay Pitts, and "Buddie" McCormick have been the backbone of the baseball team, and "Rock" has been chosen for the second time to lead his "hushleaguers" into the fray.

LExINGTON WINTER GARDEN

In track, "Pete" Geyer and Massie are sure of places on the team, and Sixteen will undoubtedly be represented by several more of its members. In gym, Chapin, C. and "Brooks" Bradford are left from last year, and "Hard Luck Percy" Christian, Captain of the team, has been on it ever since his first year at V. M. I. The whole tennis team, "Murphy" Fechheimer (Captain and two years winner of the singles championship of barracks), Gillespie, Pitts, L., Massie, and "Buck" Lewis, is seen to be composed of Sixteen men, and we can count on them to present their opponents with the little end of a goodly number of matches.

At the first meeting of the class upon returning from that marvelous summer furlough, Lindsay Pitts resigned the Presidency, and Victor Reese Gillespie was elected in his place. Lindsay was prevailed upon to accept the Vice-Presidency, however. No emergency has arisen but that these men have shown themselves capable of doing that which is best for the class, and we are glad to be able to thank them here for their splendid work. George Sneed and "Ikie" DeGraff were reelected, and any one who saw the Final Ball last year will "state without fear of successful contradiction" that the German this year will be "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

THE BOMB

Brevity, besides being "the soul of wit," is indispensable to a class history, so stirring tales of such things as the Banquet, and Hymns of Hate against Restricted Limits, and hundreds of other incidents in "our" year must of necessity be omitted. Of course, every class has an exalted opinion of itself, but surely we can say that we have done our share, and always will, in the making of a Greater V. M. I. Moreover, it is with a realization of their ability that we turn over the reins of government to the Class of Seventeen. May the men of Sixteen be as loyal in their undertakings in after life as they have been to their class and Alma Mater!

SECOND CLASS

A History

ACKING somewhat in the dignity of a First Classman, yet looking with scorn upon the undignified acts of the characteristic Third Classman, and one whose favorite expression is, "When I was a rat"—this is the result of a complete brain racking on the part of the Historian for a suitable definition of a Second Classman. He is one who wears two service stripes on his sleeve, and whose left hand and always the little finger of this hand are greatly in evidence at the hops—displaying to the calic in general "the best looking ring yet."

Upon the completion of our third class year we left feeling that we had done more than our share in preserving all the customs of that class. We shot bombs, painted George, and even took out a "deck" on the clock by artistically decorating its face with the numerals, "17."

So in September over seventy Second Classman again took up the active duties of "keydetship," with the ultimate end in view of capturing the elusive dip, and may we all be successful in this determination!

Among the four courses, Civil, Electrical, Chemistry, and "Sweetest" Liberal Arts, the class is practically evenly divided, but while the "Engineers" may be seen at 2 C. P. with a look on their faces about as cheerful as that of the exponents of Schopenhauer, the Liberal Artists recline peacefully in the Hay, fully convinced that the Virginia Military Institute is a wonderful health resort.

At the first class meeting of the year Bucher and Hamlin were unanimously reelected President and Vice-President, respectively, and their energies have always been untiringly spent in all that was good for Seventeen. E. C. Brown was again chosen Historian. At this meeting also E. C. Brown and Saunders were elected leaders of the Final Ball, and it is certain that they will do all in their power to make that function a howling success.

BRUIN AND SHIRLEY

THE BOMB

WILLIE AND HIS DRUM

Seventeen has a great deal to be proud of in athletics. In football we furnished Nelms as Captain, under whose leadership the team had a most successful season. Bucher, Cole, E., Fetterolf, Goodman, and Steele, all received monograms for work well done. While Fetterolf is our only representative on the basket-ball team, his work all season being characterized by his uncanny knack in shooting baskets. Likewise in baseball and all other cadet activities Seventeen has always done her part; and, although our number has greatly decreased since our rathood days, it has always been, and will ever continue to be, our policy to do everything in our power for the good of V. M. I.

We are now just before entering on our last year; and, although it's a rocky road to travel and many may fall by the wayside, we will always hold Seventeen and V. M. I. foremost in our hearts, and make the fight through life all the easier by working for the honor of our class and our school.

THIRD CLASS

A History

"O heartfelt raptures, bliss beyond compare."

INALS! That mirage, our Mecca, came at last—then to be transformed from the lowly rodent to that divine form of Keydet, a mean Third Classman. Majestic, wonderful!

With a longing, "not akin to pain" (?), we returned to this dear old barracks for another year. Many of our classmates did not return because their mothers didn't raise them up to be soldiers, while some did not wish to be a dungeon spoil for another year. But to celebrate our return we proceeded to institute a "Reign of Terror" for the newly cadet, which lasted for about a month, during which time woe was it to the rat who unfortunately brought down upon himself the wrath of one of those demigods, by attempting to wear his cap at a rakish angle, or should enviously cast his "slimy eyes" upon him. But all good things have an end, and no longer were we allowed to rule supreme.

BEING "MEAN"

THE BOMB

But our naughty reign was not to be so unceremoniously interrupted. Consequently, one night while barracks was sunk in sweet repose, those loyal followers of Bryan, the "Peacemakers," arose and most rudely seized, bound, and threw the corporal of the guard into the bath-house, a place seldom frequented. They then proceeded to give barracks a much-needed coat of paint. As the night was cold, they gave George his annual coat of tar; and, to make sure of his warmth for the coming winter, dumped feathers on this. But this was too good to be gotten away with, for suddenly barracks was awakened by what sounded like the squealings of an enormous pig. I proved to be the corporal of the guard, who had succeeded in eluding the vigilant eyes of his guardians. Consequently, a few Bryanites had to take most hastily an indefinite furlough, while some gave a close imitation of "Old Dutch Cleanser" and "_____," for quite awhile.

However, this was not all, for some of our number, desirous of perfecting themselves in the art of throwing hand-grenades, took, as usual, the sentinel on No. 5 as their target. As the target practice was becoming too frequent, the Commandant called the Subs together to decide upon a means of prevention. While they were engaged in their work, a bomb went off which rivaled in volume of sound one of those famous 75 cm. guns. It was exasperating. Immediately a search was instituted for combustibles, but it proved to be in vain.

WATCHING THE FIGHT

THE BOMB

But these practices were not our only ones. Deep down in his heart, each man in Eighteen has "Old V. M. I.," as shown partly by our record in athletics. In football, Marshall, Gray, Harris, Bertschey, and Hawkins won monograms and glory. Marshall was our only monogram man in basketball, but we had many good ones on the scrubs. In baseball, Marshall, Gray, Harris, and Lewis, R., showed up well.

At the first part of the year, the class reelected H. P. Gray President, and made P. W. Root Vice-President, to lead and guide us throughout the year, and admirably have they fulfilled their trust.

We have lost many good men during the year, and regret very much to see them go; but, although they are no longer here, we still claim them as classmates. The unity and spirit of Eighteen has been clearly manifested throughout this year, and though a spark yet in embryo, we shall cherish and nurture it until it shall burst into the flame of everlasting friendship.

YOUNG SCAMPS

THE BOMB

Running the Block

When the O. C. has inspected,
And the keydet is awake,
There comes that wish for freedom,
And so the chance we take.
With a sweater tight around us,
Perchance a citizen's suit,
We depart in haste for realms unknown
To pluck forbidden fruit.
We leave barracks through a window—
Eleven, twelve, or nine—
But looking "sub-wards" always
To see if a light doth shine.

With the freedom comes a longing
For a tender piece of meat,
And so we hike it to the Greeks (?)
And give ourselves a treat.
Of course, there's nothing like it,
Unless we meet a sub,
And then, you know, there's hell to pay—
Ah me! There is the rub!

Demerits, tours, or even worse,
They give us quite a shock,
But the "game is worth the candle."
Say the Runners of the Block.

FOURTH CLASS

A History

HE eighth of September, nineteen hundred and fifteen, dawned clear and bright, predicting a happy future for the new Rat Class born on that day. There assembled rats of every description except color—they were all green. For several days the Superintendent's office was crowded until one hundred and ten had matriculated, well worthy to keep up the long-standing dignity and record of V. M. I.

Well do we remember those first weeks. The days were taken up with learning the new things every rat has to learn. Of course, at first it was hard, but as time passed things grew easier, and we became less dumb.

Soon came football, and to this we furnished Cullom, besides several good men on the scrubs. Toward the middle of the season came the Gallaudet game with the never-to-be-forgotten victory for V. M. I. As we entered the Arch after the game we were greeted with the pleasing words, "Slouch, Mister." That was enough, and for the rest of the day we enjoyed the privilege of being old cadets.

SNOW FIGHT

THE BOMB

However long it seemed to Christmas, the turning point of the year soon came with its many boxes. Again we didn't have to fin out, and "Brother Rats" literally swarmed the stoops.

Just six days after Christmas came our first good snow. According to custom, the rats of A, B, and C Companies were arrayed against those of D, E, and F Companies. The battle on the Hill was pleasing enough to the old cadets looking on, but after making several charges we were all in and nearly frozen stiff. We were all delighted when General Dulaney put a stop to the fray with his "sweet" music.

Basket-ball season came, and we furnished Rogers besides Sullivan and Scrivens, the latter two showing up well on the Scrubs.

Exams hit us in the midst of all this. After the agony, through which most of us passed safely, a class meeting was held for the purpose of electing officers. Rogers was chosen as President, and Cullom as Vice-President. With our future in the hands of these men, we feel safe in predicting a class that will, in every way, prove to be one of the best in the history of the Institute.

BELLHOP, SHOE SHINER, DOCTOR, VALET,
NIGHT WATCHMAN, MUSICIAN, AND GRAFTER
OF THE ROCK BRIDGE ALUM SPRINGS,
VIRGINIA:

AUG. 1ST—The Cadets begin to arrive—all of them with clinking suitcases.

AUG. 2D—Same as above. Major Anderson called the Cadets together to-day and told them that the Alum would hereafter be run as a kindergarten.

AUG. 3D—Mr. Randolph, Mr. Sturcke, and Mr. Rothert are given part of a free haircut by the other Cadets.

AUG. 4TH—Tom Potts, helped by the bathers, illustrated a new dive. Tom Potts had on his cits. Booze Whittle returns to St. Regis at midnight smelling like a kitchen.

AUG. 5TH—Skeeter Hix and Bunny Vaughan bet John Pitts two dollars on the Jewess, before taps event, draw rain checks, and lose. Pig Ward, on roan filly Jewess, wins all-age, after taps race.

AUG. 6TH — Bunny Vaughan is attacked by a nigger in the dark. General hunt follows, and P. I. ambushes litter of pork.

AUG. 7TH—Pig Ward exhibits latest style of holding partner while dancing. Dee George Sued and Skeeter Hix elected leaders of the German.

ON TO LEXINGTON

THE BOMB

AUG. 8TH—Marshmallow roast given by Calic in honor of B. Vaughan's tenor. The Calic were keen.

AUG. 9TH—Cadets, with help of guns, aid parting country swains on their way. B. D.'s gun gets plugged, and Major appropriates firearms, and in return hands out certified studying.

AUG. 10TH — Swallow - tail - champagne dinner in Goshen is attended by keydets in soft shirts and palm beaches.

AUG. 11TH—Tom Potts roams around lobby of Allegheny Inn with an armful of beer bottles.

AUG. 12TH—Jim Welton and Booze Whittle go to sleep with a chicken, and don't find out about it until "feet on the floor."

AUG. 13TH—Tempus Fugate scouts bowling-alley.

AUG. 14TH—B. Vaughan imports shell food from civilization, and tries to use Panama's hay for an ice-box to put sea food in.

AUG. 15TH—Buck Lewis at watermelon feast puts melon rind in Calic's hay.

AUG. 16TH — Ladies' leap-year dance was a fizzle.

AUG. 17TH—Founding of the Tuscarora and Westmoreland Clubs.

AUG. 18TH — Captain Corse's auto is borrowed, and Tom Potts and Gonni Groover think it to be an aeroplane. Pete Geyer's conscience hurts others more than himself.

THE POOL

ON THE BOMB

TOM'S DIKE

AUG. 22ND—Tom Potts wins dancing contest.

AUG. 23RD—"Rebecca at the well" disappears.

AUG. 24TH—Ladies' German wonderful success. P. I. makes the punch keydet style, and Bob Warren and B. Vaughan dance 20 straight with their calic.

AUG. 25TH—Booze Whittle, B. Vaughan, and P. Geyer hold all-night Dynamos of Materials session, smell smoke, save the candy in the showcase, investigate and find it only the kitchen fires.

AUG. 26TH—P. I. on exploration tour falls in the creek, sprains his suit, and tears his knee.

AUG. 27TH—Tom Potts introduces latest fad by walking around in a barrel—two ladies faint, and one gets hysterics when he gives an exhibition of Mercury, St. Regis bound and barrel—less.

AUG. 28TH—Pig Ward gets treated for weak spine.

AUG. 29TH—Keykets wash the bulletin boards from the walls of the St. Regis.

AUG. 30TH—They're leaving, thank God.

AUG. 19TH—Correct meaning of "Sic Semper Tyrannis" defined, and Booze Whittle explains it to colored race by means of pugilistic demonstration.

AUG. 20TH—Final German. Second bowl of punch. The light that hit Dee George's girl and the one that B. Vaughan lost and won. Michaux makes first attempt at soul kiss and fails.

AUG. 21ST—Pig Ward tries to break bottom of swimming-pool with his face.

Summer Joys and Summer Not

When you've walked and walked o'er the arid plain,
And your arm is filled with a cramping pain;
When your shoulder's chafed and your feet are sore,
And you groan and swear you can go no more;
When your shirt is stuck to your back, all wet,
And your old cap's visor is dripping sweat;
When your knees go weak and your back goes lame,
And you know you'll never more be the same—
You've drilled, my boy, you've drilled!

HIKE

THE keydet stops another on the stoop, and the following conversation takes place: "Whatcha reckon? The corps is ordered to Europe." "Aw, quit lying." "Well, we are going to the exposition, sure enough." "You swear we are." "No, but Doc Hinty said Labby Jim told him that Joe's got a hunch we might go to the Confederate Reunion in Richmond the first part of June."

This is the general rule that governs rumors that are no sooner uttered than they are disseminated over barracks — so highly embellished and mutilated as to be unrecognizable to their originators. This particular one sounded so reasonable, however, that every one began to swear off on "big ones" and such luxuries in order to be financially equipped for the trip. Then all doubts were set at rest by a series of tentative orders. We were to be present for the celebration, and then hike around the battlefields in the vicinity of Richmond. Meantime we had been fording the Nile, scaling perpendicular cliffs, and slaughtering the enemy (imaginary) by the wholesale, in order to develop the principle of Preparedness for the hike.

On June the second Tom's "misery whistle" summoned us to a very damp rev on the stoops. No one emanated an atmosphere of good cheer except those chronic optimists known as "reveille whistlers" (who will have a special deck in Hades with Du blowing rev constantly until relieved by Gabriel, the other musician of the guard). After each man had securely wrapped his blanket around toothpaste and extra hose, his packing was completed, but the acting quartermaster sergeants loaded trunks with shakos and dikes, and then baggage wrestled in the cold, gray morn. There was a special formation at half-past eight, from which about half of each company fell out to get mislaid articles, such as "countrolls," fowling pieces, and funds. Overcoats and raincapcs were worn to the Lexington Terminal, and pieces were kept from damage by the judicious application of vaseline.

The bilious-hued special pulled out at nine o'clock wildly cheered by Siamese and Rush Miller. The journey soon resolved itself into a time-killing contest, with the King of Indoor Sports taking first place. Many a "roodles" spelled disaster for some devotee who had calculated on taking Her out to dinner on the proceeds of that pot. We rolled into Richmond in the afternoon, greeted by the "Old Yell" from the ever faithful alumni—and it was still raining. The Stonewall Jackson Band met us at the station, and led the way to the Grays' Armory. The Grays extended every courtesy, and saved much confusion by assigning each company a separate room, where trunks, rolls, guns, and equipment were stacked.

We were free the rest of the evening; and, after a stampede for the showers, most of us took advantage of the kind invitation to attend the dance at the Country Club. Of course, every one had the time of his young life, and the jitneys were crowded until the wee sma' hours.

Early rev Thursday morning; and, for those who didn't "desire to—fall out," breakfast at the Masonic Temple. Perfect dikes were thrown on for the parade, although we didn't move off until two hours after assembly. Many keydets swore they didn't know there were so many people in the world as were lined up on the streets, in windows and doors, and on the roofs of all the buildings. It was hard to resist the temptation to jump when a familiar feminine voice would call out, "Why, there's Willie—hello, Willie," but the corps was on its best behavior, and remained so all the time away from Lexington. The veterans passed in review, stepping high and strutting as if fifty years had rolled away. The corps followed, each platoon line looking like the edge of a T square. The vets halted at street corners for refreshments, while we gazed on hungrily, but in vain. We were informed that it was unmilitary to accept sandwiches from even the most charming of calic.

The rain commenced again, but not until the long parade was over and the corps had "batted it up." "Cut the guy ropes" was the slogan, and the distance to the Armory was quickly covered. Nobody was too "petered" to attend the balls given at the Armories of the Blues and Grays. Roomy as the ballrooms were, every available foot of space was being one-stepped or fox-trotted on, as the case may be. The vets were "right"; and when they danced the Virginia Reel and yelled for Dixie, we discovered where the "old-time pep" comes from. In addition, the Blues staged a midnight carbalet that compared favorably even with the Christmas Eve minstrel show.

Friday morning the corps, minus blanket rolls, took a nine-mile jaunt to Seven Pines, where an extremely interesting and instructive lecture on Civil War campaigns was delivered by Major Durfee, of the Army War College. The Q. M. sergeants were left behind to attend the matinée and guard the blanket rolls. A tasty repast, prepared on the field range, was served by Commissary Sergeant Ashburn. The corps returned in the afternoon, swinging into Richmond whistling "Our Director," an infallible sign that all is well. That night theaters, hotels, and streets were full of sightseeing keydets, all of whom were shown a "keen" time by the people of Richmond. Those who made a late but desperate sprint for the Armory were greeted by the news that taps had been postponed until twelve. Back to the dance in a Ford limousine!

"Latest dope—battlefield hike called on account of rain!" This was "fruit," and we concluded that we each had a horseshoe where it would do the most good. Saturday the corps en-trained for Petersburg in pursuance to a special order, arriving there before noon. After parading the streets behind the fife and drum corps of '76, we hied us to the historic Crater. We have paraded in blizzards, gone to church in cloud whole corps and a number of visitors being seated in the Crater itself. After another pleasant saunter back to Petersburg, arms were stacked and dinner served. Dear reader, the author had never before seen so many pretty girls and home-made sandwiches all in one place. Everybody in Petersburg turned out to give us a "welcome to our city," and we consoled ourselves on departing only by reflecting that it was a case of "On to Richmond!" again. That night the corps was turned loose again; and, believe us, there was considerable sweat—that is to say, "an enjoyable time was had by all."

BOUND FOR SEVEN PINES

Sunday morning the corps attended church at St. James. In the afternoon the jitneys did a rushing business, and the "large hounds" were severing Biscuits right and left.* This was the last day of grace, and was taken advantage of accordingly. One crew of the boys went out to Westhampton and got a general idea what a female V. M. I. is like.

After rev and packing Monday morning, "all the corps is divided into three parts," one part breakfasting at hotels, another part at dairy lunches, and the remainder at the Temple. Such were the varying degrees of financial standing. Calic galore were at the less ones rode alternately in the baggage car and coal tender, acquiring a rich coat of soot as a souvenir.

GOING HOME

At twilight the train "backed up and scotched" through East Lexington, and a few minutes later the corps was marching to barracks. It is uncertain which appealed the more, supper or bath, but there is no doubt as to the popularity of the goal of many a keydet's ambition—we refer to the hay. The Q. M. sergeants dismounted from the "gravy train" about this time and unloaded trunks until taps, being assisted by the bystanders, who all wanted to know at once: "Where in H—— is my breastplate?" "Did you see a pair of ducks with grass stains on 'em?" "Say, who's been jumping up and down on my shako?" ad infinitum. Next day an inspection was held for lost, strayed, or stolen articles, and so endeth the Richmond trip and the 1915 hike.

ROANOKE TRIP

MOST of the trips taken by the corps are products of ancient rumors, but contrary to custom the Roanoke Trip is a custom in itself. Many, perhaps, wish that the said custom had never been inaugurated, but scrupulously refrain from saying so. Accordingly, the corps, with the exception of a very few, went to Roanoke on November 25, 1915. The location of Roanoke, the cause of the trip, and the outcome of the trip are doubtless familiar landmarks to all who will read this, and the mere fact that we went must suffice.

We entrained at Lexington in due time, and after a most refreshing spin (during which, we may remark en passant, we learned that it is naughty to appear in public in one's—er—underclothing) we arrived at the Magic City at 11:30, when we were marched to the Ponce de Leon, the official headquarters of the corps, and dismissed. The culinary parts of the city were quickly found, and keydets in hordes came, saw, and filled their—well, you know what I mean.

BEFORE THE GAME

THE BOMB

The writer does not know the pastimes indulged in by everybody, but however enticing and alluring they were, he does know that spirit dominates love, for when the time came to march to the Fair Grounds, it could be truly said, "The gang's all here." Our Victrola, I mean our band, led us faithfully, in spite of the jibes of the carping sideline critics. After showing the wondering populace at the Fair Grounds the results of "virile" military training, we were assigned to four rows of seats almost 18 feet long, and after a typical Semitic outing (I refrain from saying "sheenie"), two squads found seats comfortably, and the other thirty-six or more sat on Mother Earth and hung their feet over. Old yells for everybody connected with the Institute were given until our throats were "bricky dry." Some kind soul wound up our "Victrola," and it did awfully well, except that nobody could hear it; and, besides, a master mind would have been required to figure out exactly what kind of close—nay, gross; I stand corrected—harmony was being attempted. But that mattered nothing; we were there to yell, and yell we did. The game started and ended, and the account is somewhere else in this volume, with none of the horrible details missing, so the reader can go there for the real "dope."

SNAKE DANCE

The V. P. I. corps should be complimented on their yelling, their music, and whole attitude, for all three were greatly admired by their old rivals. We will skip now, and start anew with "after the game." To say "we dispersed" is very expressive, some finding refuge and solace in kind ladies' glances, others in equally delectable quarters, and not a few at the theater.

In short, we had the same good time we always do, and nobody seemed very keen about going home—excuse me, to barracks. Nine o'clock that night was the time of departure, and a few keydets "smelt" as usual, but the majority formed and entrained for "Hay and Lexington." We were welcomed back by the poor, suffering Quarter Guard at least, and nineteen O. C. M. N. I.'s were unnecessary that night. Some may have dreamed—it is doubtful—but all slept, the sleep of the weary; all heartbroken, but sternly resolved to get the other "end of the stick" next year.

THE COACHES

THE TEAM

FOOTBALL prospects at V. M. I. were given a setback in September when it was announced that the captain-elect, Oakes, would not return to school. In Oakes we lost a punter of rare ability and a hard-plunging full-back. Nehms, who was selected to succeed him, combines many of the best qualities of the successful leader, but injuries and illness kept him out of the game during a good part of the season. Also Fetterolf, who played brilliantly in the back field in the first games, was lost by a broken collarbone. These losses, together with those occasioned by graduation of the Class of 1915, were enough to discourage all but the most optimistic.

This recital is not an attempt to establish an alibi for the loss of games, but just a bare statement of facts. The record of the team of 1915-1916 on the field is one that needs no apology, but deserves much praise. To win six games, tie one, and lose two, is a fair season's record for any team. When it is considered that V. M. I. did not enter a single game in which she was not outweighed—often by 10 to 15 pounds per man, the above record becomes distinctly creditable. The writer, representing the feelings of numbers of Alumni, wishes to testify to the unsurpassed skill of Coach Frank Gorton and to the gameness and fighting spirit shown by the team. We wish, also, to thank Assistant Coach Leech, Mr. Oscar Randolph, and Rice Youell for their efficient work with the squad.

The season began on September 25th with a victory over Hampden-Sidney by a score of 25 to 7. October 2d saw us win from William and

CAPTAIN NEHMS

THE BOMB

PITTS, J.

Mary College, 19 to 6. In these first two games our back field showed up well, with Nelms, Fetterolf, and Harris advancing the ball. However, Fetterolf was injured in the W. and M. game, and was out for practically the rest of the season.

On October 9th V. M. I. won a 7 to 0 victory over the fast, heavy team from Gallaudet College, and the next Saturday won a tight game from Richmond College by 13 points to 6.

October 23d found us playing the University of North Carolina to a 3 to 3 tie in Greensboro. In this game Cullom distinguished himself at center, playing all over the field and making many tackles. Hawkins put up a good game at left guard, and McCormick kicked a pretty field goal from the 35-yard line.

Virginia's powerful team was in full stride when we met them on October 30th, and we came away with the short end of a 44 to 0 score. However, when we saw what Virginia's wonderful offensive did to Vanderbilt shortly afterwards, we did not feel that we were alone in defeat.

Coming back strongly the next Saturday, V. M. I. won from Wake Forest College by a score of 21 to 6, in a game that showed what a light, fast team can do against the old style line-plunging attack. Wake Forest finally resorted to the forward pass, but it was too late. One of their passes was intercepted by Harris, of V. M. I., who ran 70 yards for a touchdown. V. M. I.'s other scores were made by forward passes, Harris to McCormick, and Gray to Bucher.

HEFLIN

THE BOMB

MCCORMICK

football team on November 26, 1915, had better revise his estimate.

Having thus finished with the past season, we turn toward a new year with confidence. And this confidence is not without reason. Although we lose five men from the squad by graduation, still we have a good nucleus for a team. There is still undeveloped material in the lower classes, and next year's Fourth Class should add a few good men. In addition to our present efficient coaching staff, we will have next year Mr. Abell, of Colgate University, who was selected by Walter Camp for the all-American team. With Harris, this year's full-back, leading a bunch of good material, and with first-class coaches, we may look forward to a successful season next fall.

November 13th saw an uphill battle, bitter all the way, in which V. M. I. defeated Clemson College, of South Carolina, 6 to 3. V. M. I. was on the defensive most of the time, and the fact that they were able to win at all against a fast aggregation, 12 pounds heavier to the man, is in itself a high tribute to the team and the coaches.

Thanksgiving Day found the cadet corps in Roanoke to support the team against their old rivals, V. P. I. But the best efforts of the team, backed by 350 loyal members of the corps, availed not to stave off defeat. In a hard, cleanly-played game we lost by a score of 27 to 9. Though defeated, we all felt that we had done our best, and had only succumbed to superior weight and speed. Any one who thinks that the Virginia Polytechnic Institute did not have a first-class

BASEBALL SQUAD

BASEBALL

IN many respects the season of nineteen-fifteen was a repetition of the preceding season, especially in as far as the winning of games was concerned. Though relatively few games were won, yet the team on the whole appeared to be the best that the Institute has turned out in many a year, and the majority of games that were lost were lost by close scores, and were due rather to errors of omission than commission.

The old, old jinx, hard luck, hung with the team tirelessly, and even the victories were won by narrow margins. The team, however, showed decided improvement over the one of the preceding year, as shown by the fact that six of the regulars batted over .300, and the throws and stops were of fine caliber, well up to the standard of college baseball. While a number of the games were lost, the scores do not give anything like an accurate estimate of the team.

The opening of the season witnessed the transfer of the diamond from the east side of the Hill to the northwest corner of the new parade ground, which was a temporary location. This new ground did not round out well into a diamond, and this fact together with lack of time for practice handicapped the team seriously.

The team started off poorly, the first game being dropped through inability to connect safely in the pinches. Likewise the second contest. However, the team soon took a brace, and the men recovered their batting eyes to the effect that the third game was won hands down. The next game was won by our ancient Blacksburg rivals, in which again the jinx figured to a great extent.

The middle of the season found the team going along at a good stride, and it was then that the majority of the games were annexed; but towards the end of the season the team struck its second slump, and it was still in this condition when the last game was played on the road.

CAPTAIN GILLESPIE

THE BOMB

"Rock" Gillespie, the old reliable, former outfielder and third-baseman for two years, piloted the team, and too much credit can not be bestowed on him for the way he handled his men under the then existing conditions. At shortstop he performed in good style, and his old black bat gave many an outfielder a long, hard chase.

On first, "College Chap" Schoen, a Georgia product, performed cleverly, covering more than his share of the diamond and "digging 'em" out of the dust, while he batted well above the .300 mark.

On second, "Buddie" McCormick, our veteran infielder, did good work also, and his sterling fielding record coupled with his grand batting average of .450 will make him long remembered in the baseball annals of the Institute.

Third base was equally divided between Hamlin and Franklin, two newcomers who had been utility men the season before. The work of "Addi" Hagan in the infield is worthy of note, for this little player displayed class in the fielding line, though his weakness with the stick kept him out of many of the games.

In the outfield the team was still less settled. Durant, Bratton, and Spessard were started in left, center, and right field, respectively, but towards the middle of the season the famous "Pitts Brothers" battery was broken up and they were sent to the outfield, occupying left and center field, while Spessard retained his position in right. The work of all three, especially "John" and "Lindsay," was of the highest order, each batting above the coveted .300 mark. Many a belated rally was directly due to the combined efforts of the three.

THE BOMB

On the pitching staff, Pitts, J., and Butcher figured most prominently, while Driscoll showed up very well. This department heretofore has been the weakest point in the defense, but the pitchers last year worked with a will that was a joy to the corps.

On the receiving end were Pitts, L., and Mahone, the latter holding down the job after Lindsay was shifted to the outfield. He held the pitchers up in big league style, while his whip cut off many a would-be pilferer of the sacks.

With a consideration of the material on hand and that which we hope to obtain, the future looks decidedly bright. Only three regulars, Schoen, Mahone, and Spessard, have been lost, and with the other vets back in their positions, Pitts, L., probably being shifted back to catcher, we have only one vacancy in the infield and two in the outfield. These no doubt can be easily filled, for many of the utility players have showed up well, while there is sure to be good material among the rats.

With the opening of next year's season, the team will find itself installed in a brand-new home on the new athletic field, where there will be plenty of room and the long-dreamed-of grandstand, bleachers, and "Big League" diamond will become realities.

Now let us pause to await the coming of the new season, for with Coach Gorton and Gillespie in command the never-die spirit will cause our star of hope to ascend in full glory to its zenith, crowning with success the untiring efforts of the wearers of the V. M. I.

THE TEAM

BASKET BALL

THE sport of basket-ball at V. M. I. is comparatively in its infancy; but, regardless of this fact, it has taken such a hold on the corps that it is ranked next, and justly so, in line with football.

On the return of the corps in September and after a general survey of the material on hand, men that were not in the least enthusiastic could not help but notice the bright prospects in view. It's tiresome to hear the "dopester" air his views, but it's great to see them materialize right before our eyes. And such was the case with regard to the team this year. Started the season off with a rush, and were only checked upon meeting the strong Virginia team in Charlottesville. However, we are quite satisfied with the result of the game when we consider that it was on a foreign court—and to quote the words of Virginia supporters, "It was one of the best games seen on the floor of the Fairweather gym this season."

Speaking about the boys themselves—John Pitts, who captained the team this year, gained quite a reputation for himself in the Virginia game. College Topics, the Virginia weekly, pronounced him to be the best guard seen there in action this season.

Rogers, John's running mate and a new man on the line-up this year, was a most aggressive player, and showed up not only as a valuable man at guard, but also as one capable of handling a forward's job. He would be a strong contender for this position, should the coach need him there next season.

"Buck" Lewis, a scrub of last year, was easily able to hold down center. Buck not only

CAPTAIN PITTS, J.

THE BOMB

has the faculty of seeing and taking advantage of every opening at the touch-off, but he was excellent in his floor work, and simply couldn't miss the basket.

Next in line comes "Peyt" Marshall. With him also it was a case of "How can he miss when he's got dead aim?" In a recent Cadet, Marshall was mentioned as being a contender for the position of guard on the All-South Atlantic, and THE BOMB is with the Cadet in making this suggestion.

Last, but not least, comes the "Wop." Fetterolf is the most aggressive bunch of nerves and energy one can imagine. He revolves like a veritable entanglement of arms and legs when he makes it obvious that he will be satisfied with nothing less than the possession of that ball. Although a little erratic in his shooting, when he cuts loose he "just goes crazy," and there's not an angle on the floor too difficult for him.

The season ended with the crowning event in the defeat of our old rivals, V. P. I. This more than made up for our losses to North Carolina and Wake Forest, games cleanly won by our opponents, but coming at the time when the team was suffering from an overtraining slump. In winning from V. P. I. by a 25 to 19, after having overcome a 9 to 2 lead, and while on a foreign court, the team showed its true caliber and the abundance of that indefinable quality of "guts."

Too much praise can not be tendered to Coach Gorton and Captain Leech for their untiring efforts in making such a successful season possible. To them we extend our heartiest congratulations, and in them we look forward to a Greater V. M. I. in this branch of athletics.

TRACK SQUAD

TRACK

AND out of its ashes grew a phoenix—so says the ancient tale. We, of V. M. I., have never made the acquaintance of this mythological bird, but after the happenings on a certain day last Finals, many keydets swear that the gentleman who wrote the story told the truth, and that they place credit and belief in his narrative. And the conversion came about in this wise: running, the sport of Greece and Rome in their ancient glory, never has had a very solid foundation at the Institute. In days gone by—about the time our daddies were rats—V. M. I. had a sure-enough track team, one which won renown in all the meets and never failed to bring home the slab of pig.

The lack of a track, cinder, board, or other, caused the death of this phoenix. Imagine, then, the surprise when Coach Gorton, holding an impromptu meet on the much-betrampled parade ground, uncovered one of the classiest bunch of sprinters, hurdlers, jumpers, discus, hammer, and long-distance men that ever trod on spikes! To see a man take a drag from a Piedmont, and five minutes later see him breaking the tape as if he had a sixty-mile gale behind him, a cinder track beneath him, and a furlough in front of him, was a startling revelation. And, kind reader, when a squad of out-of-condition, hay-loving keydets pull off a stunt like that, then the trick of the phoenix is crippy as unto the Liberal Arts course.

With the help of the 1915 Finals track meet, the pulling of strings "several," and the keeping of the shoes of the Athletic Council well salivated, Hardin Massie created the eighth wonder of the world. He rolled, bullied, and b—ached the Council until he received permission for a meet with V. P. I. at Blacksburg, and a trip to University of Pennsylvania for participation in the annual contests held there. Massie is to be thanked and congratulated for having done more for track than any manager we have had yet.

The team's prospects are bright, and the material is good. We hate to brag, but with our manager handling the business end; Coach Gorton, the training and coaching; the messhall, the diet; and the keydets' legs, the running part, why, the team can not help but come out ahead. The combination is a winning one; and, furthermore, remember that a keydet always wears creases on a trip!

GYMNASIUM TEAM

UE to a lack of meets the gym team is not as well known as it might be, but there are many men who take an absorbing interest in this branch of athletics, and two big exhibitions are held each year, in which the participants strive to outdo each other in deeds of daring and strength in order to win that coveted "V. M. I."

The first exhibition comes at government inspection and is rather quiet, but the second takes place at Finals when Lexington is filled with fair calic, and each man wishes to "show off" before some particularly beautiful young lady.

There is a fanfare of trumpets, the band strikes up a lively tune, and the team comes prancing in, chests expanded, muscles taut, and nerves tingling. First is the tumbling, followed by many intrepid feats on the horizontal and parallel bars, then enormous and intricate pyramids, and finally a thrilling exhibition on the flying rings. Next, in rapid but orderly succession, are boxing, wrestling, and fencing; and then, amidst thunderous applause, the team marches off the floor, each man glancing from the corner of his eye at a certain spot and wondering if his stunts have aided and strengthened his cause in Her estimation.

CAPTAIN CHRISTIAN

TENNIS TEAM

TENNIS

It is a deplorable fact that the gentle sport of tennis has not been taken up with the gusto and vim so characteristic of the keydet in other branches of athletics. Perhaps it is because his nature delights in more ferocious pastimes, or still more likely because the first exploit of the team representing the Institute was somewhat unsuccessful.

This year, however, an attempt will be made to establish tennis as a noticeable branch of athletics. Thus far requests for matches have been received from V. P. L., Catholic University, and Eastern College, and no doubt there will be several more to come.

All the members of last year's team, with the exception of Benners, are back and ready to go forth and do battle if they are but given the chance.

So when the trees once more blossom forth in their beautiful verdure, and the birds chirp merrily as they hop to and fro amongst the branches, numerous keydets will be seen wending their way to the courts, not going there solely for the pleasure, but also to endeavor to increase in efficiency so that V. M. I. may turn out a winning team.

THE BOMB

Class Football

H, ye who love to have the blood in your veins tingle as before your eyes are enacted spectacles in which the lives of heroes are endangered, ye who in times of yore did gaze upon the battling gladiators, and ye who have witnessed the gory bull fight—think not that ye have been thrilled to the utmost! Nay, for ye have never seen a struggle between those mighty engines of superhuman activity, the various class elevens who strive savagely to exhibit their prowess in the game of football.

See them as they stride towards the field of battle, eyes alight, nostrils dilated, their perfect bodies throbbing with the vigor and strength of youth. Ye gods, what a sight! Yonder comes '16, led by that imperturbable pillar of muscle and brawn, Victor Reese Gillespie. Behind them, eager for the fray, '17 advances, guided by the mighty Mike Mills, whose very head doth light the way for his followers. And now appears '18 following their little Sammy Witt, who is scarcely perceptible, for his stature is not great, though upon his shoulders rests a magnificent mind, through whose wisdom and courage his tribe has gained many a victory. Last of the column come those who are termed Rats, sturdy and fleet, but a bit unsure, for they are as yet unlearned in the mysteries of all the rites.

The first of the noble bands to clash are '16 and '18. As they face each other on the field, the very earth seems to tremble to think of the thumps which it must endure. The whistle's shrill blast is heard, high into the air soars the prize, and the antagonists rush towards it. Fast and furious is the '18 and finally victory is theirs, as Taylor the Titan tears down the turf for a touch-down.

Now '17 and rats clash. The former show the knowledge that comes with experience, but they are too eager, and as they seek to grasp the prize their trembling fingers do let it slip away. See, it happens now. Ah me! A rat doth pounce upon it and bears it quickly away. The older warriors are vanquished.

Watch now the fiercest battle of them all. The two victors are about to meet. Look upon their terrible countenances. So glare the combatants that "hell grows darker at their frown." They come together and form a writhing pile. See, there sticks out an arm and there a leg. More brutal the conflict grows. The shouts of savage rage, the cries of pain, the grunts of wounded warriors commingle in one fray. Lo, what is that close to the earth and speeding like the wind? Zounds, 'tis little Sammy! But, see, there comes another—'tis Rock! Ah, could ducks but waddle as fast as he, what wonderful birds they would be! He seizes Sammy, grabs him by the scruff of the neck, and both are hidden in a clond of dust. More terrible waxes the battle, but the gods are on the side of sound of indistinguishable strife. Long they fight, but neither can gain over the other. They weary, the action wanes. 'Tis enough; let them cease; to both give a portion of the victory. They depart from the arena, weary and dusty, and with lagging steps repair to their abodes to doff their armor and refresh themselves 'neath sparkling fountains.

The dames (for dames there were—their lords preferring the game of football to the more expensive diversion of driving) and lords wend their way homeward also. And, as they went, they talked of the various warriors. Said one, a fighter himself of days gone by: "Our Victor Reese did nobly to-day, but me thinks were it not for his trip to Roanoke, he had had more vim." And a fair dame speaks forth: "Was not the stately Son Read glorious, so handsome and so dashing?" So all remark on those whom they think were most distinguished. But those mentioned most were Rock the Redoubtable; Frazer the Fearless; Read the Radiant, of '16; Mills the Mighty; Hart the Hardy, of '17; Cutler the Courageous; Semmes the Sinewy; Taylor the Terrible, of '18; Roberdeau the Robust; Parsons the Peerless; Rogers the Rugged, of '19.

FIRST CLASS TEAM

THE result of the first game of the class series of championship games found Sixteen trailing. The Third Class, with a much more finished team, was able to lower First Class colors by a score of 22 to 14. To say that the game was snappy is putting it mildly. To the spectators it was a veritable entanglement of arms and legs, with the best man in the smash always on top. Sixteen shone in the latter style of play, and but for consideration on its part many casualties would have occurred.

The next game of the series saw the Rats victorious over the Second Class. This game was conspicuous for the lady-like deportment of both teams. As a whole, the exhibition was far below par as class games go. It was rumored that Steele made the remark that "he didn't wish to provoke the ire of the R o d e n t s by seemingly rough play, and wished to avoid any familiarity that might arise therefrom."

A mythical five, chosen from the four classes, might well be composed of these men: from Eighteen, Hock, right forward; Epes, center; Hawkins, right guard; from Nineteen, Ewing, left forward; from Sixteen, McKay, left guard. The season was a decided success, but it is suggested that, should the class games be played prior to the Varsity season, much valuable material would come to light.

All adverse criticism aside, however, both teams made a creditable showing; but it must be remembered that a class team must get "hard" if it hopes to get a favorable write-up.

The last game of the season was a spectacle worth remembering. It was not only a contest that catered to the Keydets' tastes, but it was so evenly

THE BOMB

Class Baseball

ESPIE the fact that the class baseball season was ushered in later than usual last spring, and the fact that exams, the Richmond trip, Calie, Finals, and Meyer-Davis were whirling madly in the brains of all concerned, yet the games were the best ever pulled off in a class series. Piggy's "laboratory" and Tommy's field work kept a lot of would-be Cobbs and Wagners off the Hill a big part of the time, but in spite of this the games were regular tooth, eye, and toenail affairs, and each one except the last required extra innings to decide the outcome. Around the whole circuit the teams were about evenly balanced, and, though there were no fence busters in evidence, the teams more than made up for this in the other department, pulling off circus fielding stunts which would make Connie Mack dive after his contract book.

The first game took place between the mean Third Class and the lowly rats. 'Twas a glorious fight, the Third Classmen finally winning 2 to 1 over their brother rats in eleven innings. "Rat" Pendleton and Bob Lewis were the opposing slabmen and pitched good ball, while "Snout" Harris did the heavy work in the field for the rats. Weary Willie Michaux, Bob Harper,

SECOND CLASS TEAM
Champions, 1915

THE BOMB

and Mike Mills carried the day for Seventeen, putting up an article of ball that would make you leave your favorite knot hole at the World Series to witness.

The game between the Second and First Classes required ten innings, The First Class winning by a 4 to 3 score, after the Second Class apparently had the game on ice. Sixteen got a one-run lead in the ninth inning, which Fifteen overcame when Sixteen started in to train for tiddledywinks. Jap Millner and "Snackmadam" Massie did the twirling, serving up all sorts of floaters and spitters, and returning many by the whiff route. 'Tis said that Stateship Jones played seven positions and Tom Holtzman furnished the noise for the other eleven and the umpire.

The victory-crowned champs of the previous season struck a snag in all departments here, from which they never succeeded in extracting their pants, and Seventeen ran away with the game by a flying start. Owing to lack of time the rest of the schedule was abandoned, so outside of Seventeen the positions of the other teams were undetermined. The class games so far outstripped the Varsity that it has been suggested that they switch places for the coming season; but, of course, we are too modest in the Class League to acknowledge this except among ourselves.

Since the teams were so evenly matched, it would be hard to pick a winner for this year, but most of them are still intact, and surely Sixteen can not but be in the van with Handsome Harry DeButts, Teddy Bear Hefflin, and Flop Amory on deck; Seventeen retains John Pender, Champe Clarke, and Jim Driscoll; of diamond dusters Eighteen still has Snout Harris, Corporal Austin, and Gwendolyn Miller; and Nineteen, from all reports, should put out a team worthy of competition with the others.

The Young Men's Christian Association was introduced at the Virginia Military Institute in 1883. The military school has greater difficulties to surmount in carrying on an association successfully than perhaps any other kind of institution, because of the more arduous and more exacting duties required of its students. However, in spite of the drawbacks incident to military life, the Association has progressed, increasing in usefulness year by year.

During the present year much has been accomplished. Meetings have been held regularly on Sunday nights, and classes have been organized for bible study. During the fall the association sent delegates to the State Convention of Associations at Richmond, where, through the help and cooperation gained at such gatherings, many excellent ideas were brought back and are being put into practice. The Association is now on the lookout for a permanent official to take charge of its affairs, as is done at other large schools, and thus more than ever increase the activity and influence of the Y. M. C. A. among cadets.

Colonel Kerlin is the one who is most to be thanked for the growth and improvement of the society. Since his arrival at the Institute he has taken great interest in its affairs, and has put through many excellent plans which have been beneficial to cadets and to the Institute.

Literary societies and debating have again come in to prominence at the Institute. Beside the reorganization at the beginning of 1915 of the old society into two societies, it was deemed wise to establish a council which should arrange for inter-collegiate debates and attend to all literary society matters outside the Institute.

The council has done much to increase the activities of literary work at the Institute. Debates have been arranged with colleges, both in Virginia and outside the State, plans have been worked out for next year's circuit, and negotiations are being carried on with respect to placing the societies in one of the large literary fraternities.

GENERAL ORDER.

No. 4.

The following resolution, adopted by the Board of Visitors at their meeting held at the Virginia Military Institute in June, 1915, is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

"Resolved, That the Board considers the existence of the Nuggetteer, Tangi Meli, and Ticquo, so-called social clubs, as in contravention of the Institute relating to good order and discipline, and directs that the Superintendent take such action as will forbid their existence, and that of similar organizations."

In compliance with this order of the Board, the existence of the above-named societies and the formation of others of similar character is forbidden.

Love at the Hops

We sat beneath the old Guard Tree;
The faint sound of the band
Came drifting to us from afar;
He gently held my—scarf.

No moonbeam found our dark retreat,
None stole upon our bliss;
We looked into each other's eyes,
And sometimes we would—talk.

Anon the wind blew keen and cold,
And chilled our corner warm;
But he, with kindly tenderness,
Would fold me with his—cape

We talked and talked of everything—
Of hope and love and life;
And that last night he asked me if
I'd be his little—sister.

The Hops

Excerpt from the Letter of a Girl to Her Friend

(Uncensored)

HAT must have been horrid, Margaret, but I have something much different to tell you. I have just been to the V. M. I. dances, and do you know that I have danced so much and giggled so much and had such a scrumptiously good time that I just hardly know how to start.

The exciting part began when we reached a window on the stairs leading to the gymnasium. George was peeved because we were about a half hour late (so he said, but men are such awful liars), but that never prevented me from enjoying the view of that gym. My dear, it was simply gorgeous! The gray, and white, and gold, and pink, and mauve, and all the colors I ever saw were intermingled just like in a great, big kladeiscope (is this spelled right?), only it hasn't any music. But as I stepped on the floor a tall keydet (that's what everybody calls them), with a face just like my lap poodle, barked, "How, but she's a cat's ankle, just as keen! Somebody put me next." Perhaps he didn't think I would hear, but I was making up my mind not to speak to him, even if we were introduced, for calling me such a horrid name.

Then the fun really did commence. When a whistle 'way down the floor blew, I changed partners so fast that I almost contracted brain fag trying to remember them for future reference. Every one was so nice to me, and said such nice things, and danced so well, that if it hadn't been for the chaperons (and they were sweet, too) I believe I would have kissed every keydet that broke!

THE BOMB

I remember one particularly because he did the Jitney Glide divinely and was so handsome. When I asked him where he got that attractive pink complexion, he said, "In Upperville," and I was about to tell him that I had quit wearing teething rings and had put my hair up a year ago, and ask him why he wanted to string me (I had never heard of Upperville) when the gloomiest keydet broke. I asked him if he had lost a relative in the war, and he said, no, but Ikie and he had to spend Saturday in the guard's house or something. He introduced me to a tall keydet that had one eye tied up (I think football players are just grand!).

but he had such an adorable way of rolling the other when he danced. He said, "Do you like hops?" and I was about to tell him that he was no gentleman when it occurred to me that that wasn't what he meant at all.

All during the dance my joy barometer was just going up in bounds, and just when it was about to "bust" out the top, a bugle blew, the keydets yelled, Rah, Rah, Calic, and the dance was over. I was so mad that I could have cried, but George reminded me of the Saturday dance, and he looked so sweet in his white uniform that I just had to smile.

On Saturday George took me driving and we saw House Mountain, and I stood with all the other girls while he went to inspection (I think it was inspection or reveille, one). They were all dressed up and marched around, and a man with a red stripe on his trousers and a sword sang a hymn and then searched them for something (the ones they called Boy Scouts, at least). Afterwards we went to the messy hall and "saw the animals feed," and it was weird but fascinating. We went to the Dutch Tavern for supper, and of course George and I had to fall out for awhile. He accused me of flirting! When a man is interesting and cute, even if he does wear glasses, wouldn't you treat him a little better than you absolutely had to? Besides, I felt sorry for him, because he has to stay up all night to write things for the Shrapnel, or whatever they call it. Anyway, George and I made up.

The last dance was like the first, only better, and I felt as if everybody was my best and oldest friend. I wore my new dress (you know, the one of rose-tinged tulle over rose taffeta, with a blue ribbon over one shoulder, just like the Lucille gown that Edna Mayo wore in the last movie we saw together), and I know I made a bit, but still the other girls were rushed a lot, too, so I suppose it's a tradition or custom or something that girls shall have a good time at V. M. I. (provided one doesn't believe but about one millionth of what those outrageous flirts say)!

They danced to the V. M. I. songs, and every one sang the words as loud as they could; and they had Leap Year dances, when the girls had to break the men. Of course, I had to make a mistake, and he stepped on my foot, and we tripped, and he said, "Dobbers up," just like it was my fault, and then suggested that we go out and see a statue.

Everything else was glorious, though, and just when I was bubbling over with happiness, that odious bugle blew again, and I just felt that the bottom was dropping out of things, and—oh! I almost forgot—George has asked me up for Finals when they have figures and parade all the time and dance all night and—oh! it's just too wonderful to talk about!

EDITOR'S NOTE.—For the benefit of those who doubt our veracity we would state that the following is a certified reproduction of the sample of epistles our young Stebbins receives from his feminine admirers.

My dear frind

i Will draw you A Line this Lomeson night as i am thinking of you.

i Look for you all day But you i didn't See.

Why did you Send me that picture off your you promise me.¹

i am going to Have Some takin this week if we Have perty weather i gess you Have forgotten me Havin you i Hop you Havin.²

My Mother Came Home Last Sunday.

When are you coming down. Let me Know and i will Look for you give Saunders³ my Best Regards and Love. Well doll Baby⁴ i Will cease. Hopppin to Hear from you Soon and A Long Letter.

. . . i Wish i Was With you What A time we Wode Have Ha.—Ha.

¹No, we don't quite get this either.

²This is also a wee bit involved, don't you think?

³See, you can horse "Hippy," too.

⁴Stebbins certainly has a way with the women!

⁵It hurts us worse than it does you to censor this part

"Taking Duty?
"No, Sir, Liberal Arts."

"DRESS UP ON THE LEFT!"

HEARD AT V. M. I.

THE BOMB

P. I. (trying to get sulphur matches by process of elimination): What is it that you use every day and I don't?

THE WOP (in a flash of inspiration): Oh, soap?

J. CRAIG MILLER (saying alphabet): . . . u, v, w, r, s, t, l, x, y, z—
If that ain't right I'm a liar.

FIRST CADET: Is she fast?

SECOND DITTO: Is she? Gosh, she covered five laps in two hours last night.

BOOZE WHITTLE: Abrasion is—abrasion is, oh, I know, Cap'n, abrasion is what a cow does when she brazes.

DEE GEORGE SNEAD: Colonel, I don't think I deserved a flat zero on that last paper.

CHLAPPIE (sweetly): Neither do I, Mr. Snead, but that is as low as the regulations permit me to mark.

A TRAGEDY IN TWO QUATRAINS

The First Class Officer in dismay
Quoth: "To-morrow is a holiday."
The First Class Private sang this lay:
"I guess that means we'll get no hay."

They gazed upon a slip, you see,
And this is what they said to me—
The F. C. P.: "O D—, O. G."
The F. C. O.: "O G—, O. D."

VENUS MILLER: Say, Kink, what is a good word to use when you want to compliment a Calic without just saying she's keen?

KINK: Why, John Craig, "obnoxious" is a good word in that case.

VENUS (with a killing glance at the Calic during an intermission): Do you know, you're so sweet, you're positively obnoxious!

HARRY: Mr. Groover, what is the command to start a squad at quick time?

GONNY: DOUBLE TIME, MARCH!

THE BOMB

SHERLOCK HOLMES TO MURPHY FECHHEIMER (who is on way to G. M. with hammer hanging to coatee): Ah, Murphy, I see you are going driving.*

THE CORONER'S VERDICT

She climbs the steps, all stateliness:
 Alas, he treads upon her dress
 (This would mar a saint's composure).
 She needs must trip—there is a rip.
 And she appears in filmy slip
 (Like a Life ad, the disclosure).
 He stands aghast and eyes her—frock (?);
 His death resulted from the shock
 (And the lady's from exposure).

WHY EDITORS GO CRAZY

SHE: Oh, you're a BOMB Editor, all right, tee hee!

FUNNY PROFESSOR: I guess you're the man that's making all these BOMBS around here, haw haw (loud laughter on his part, in which section politely joins)!

ONE OF BARRACKS WITS: If I hit you on the head with an Annual you'd be BOMB-pted, wouldn't you? That's good, I ain't kiddin' yer a pound! (Give him air—he's foaming at the mouth!)

ET TU, GENERAL: If you don't—ts—pay all your debts to THE BOMB, ts, plock, you're liable to become one, er!

(Repeat at will for everybody down to Captain John.)

GRAND FINALE

Editor and Business Manager gladly board B. & O. for Staunton, murmuring, "Tra la la, I hear the little birdies sing!"

*This is deep stuff and we don't expect everybody to get it.

APCO No. 3 Stapling Machine

THE APCO No. 3 STAPLER is a foot-power machine, for general use about the office, paper box factory, and laundries. It will bind paper, being provided with an adjustable gauge, whereby legal papers may be uniformly stapled in a neat and attractive as well as an easy manner. It is very neat and substantial and adds to the attractiveness of the office furniture, having an oxidized copper head and japanned pedestal. ¶ This machine is useful in stapling corners of folding boxes, as one staple in each corner reinforces the box and its cover and holds the same from bulging and breaking when packed. Suit and like boxes can be used many times when stapled upon this machine, thus making the machine a great adjunct to the Department and Ladies' and Gents' Furnishing Stores. ¶ Its use in Laundries cannot be fully appreciated without a trial, for in addition to stapling Apco Truforms for Collars and Cuffs, it can be used for stapling laundry lists, it having been found that it will, in most cases, dispense with pins. ¶ Wherever rubber bands are used to hold papers, deposit slips, and the like, this machine can be used, it providing a permanent fastener, which, however, permits access to any paper when necessary.

TO possess either, you must work them. First acquire the health, and the wealth will come easier. We have solved the problem, with our long years of experience in the athletic line, how to make exercise a pleasure. A perusal of our Catalogue will testify to this, and give you the desire to get out in the open and play. The Catalogue is yours for the asking. It shows pictures and prices of the many different articles manufactured by us to make physical exercise a pleasure.
